SECOND STORM SWEEPS TEXAS

Wind Attains Velocity of Sixty Miles an Hour.

HEAVY DAMAGE IS DONE TO PROPERTY

A Number of Buildings Are Wrecked in Austin.

City Hospitals Are Among Those Wrecked—Trains on the San Antonio and Aransas Pass Railroad Are Blown Off the Track—Report Has a Number of Lives Lost—The Situation.

Austin, Texas, July 22.—A second storm swept over southern Texas and the gulf coast last night and delayed reports today. Heavy damage resulted. The wind reached sixty miles an hour and caused heavy property damage.

A number of buildings in Austin, including the city hospital, were wrecked. Trains on the San Antonio & Arkansas Pass railroad were blown off the track at Luling, near Yoakum. There is a report that a train was wrecked by the storm near Corpus Christi and that a number of lives were lost.

Rages Five Hours.

The storm raged for five hours. It was the worst hurricane this section of the country has known for years. The wind uprooted trees, unroofed buildings, wrecked signs and played havoc with wires. The storm extended north from the gulf and towns in the Colorado river valley from Austin to the gulf suffered greatly. Reports from the gulf show the flooded condition worse today than yesterday along the summer resort district.

Considerable damage is reported at Hallettsville, Yoakum, Rosenburg and Lagrange, where a number of houses were destroyed and the railroad depots blown down. Wires to these towns are down and it has been impossible to get details of the damage. Telephone and telegraph communication throughout the entire storm swept district is crippled today Galveston, which could be reached easily yesterday, is now cut off again. It is believed that the interruption is on land, however, and that there is no danger of further damage in the city itself.

Meager reports of a railroad wreck near Corpus Christi say the accident was caused by the storm. Whether there was any loss of life has not been learned.

Several Feet Under Water.

Port Arthur, Texas, July 22.—The towns of Sabine and Sabine Pass are several feet under water from the gulf. The inhabitants were brought to Port Arthur yesterday, and it is thought no lives were lost. Reports from other coast points between here and Bolivar are meager. Several miles of track of the Bolivar division of the Santa Fe are under water, the gulf waters having swept inland for two miles. Boats and tugs were out all last night picking up waterbound residents along this part of the coast.

Every Building Demolished.

San Antonio, Tex., July 22.—Several people were injured and every building at Random, Texas, demolished by the storm which swept southern Texas late last night.

East Bernard has been blown away, but no loss of life is reported. Eagle Lake suffered heavily, a church and a dozen stores being blown from their foundations. Rosenberg and a half dozen other towns in the rice belt have been heavily damaged. The damage to the rice crop is over $100,000.

Velasco Destroyed.

Houston, Texas, July 22.—Velasco, Texas, fifty miles from Galveston, was completely wrecked last night by a second hurricane which broke about midnight. With the exception of three stores not a building in the town is left standing. A number of people are said to have been injured.

Queries have been sent to all nearby towns asking if aid is needed. No replies have been received owing to the demoralized telegraph and telephone service.

A Third Storm.

Houston, Texas, July 22.—Bay City was struck by a terrific storm this afternoon. Two persons are known to have been killed, a number of others were injured and the town was heavily damaged. Most of the buildings in the town were wrecked and some of them completely demolished. The property loss is estimated at over $150,000.

SIX SUFFRAGETTES RELEASED TODAY

Terribly Emaciated and Scarcely Able To Walk.

London, July 22.—Emaciated and scarcely able to walk, six more of the suffragette prisoners at Holloway jail were released today as the result of the hunger strike. The six were borne out through the streets by their cheering comrades, declaring they will expose a grave scandal in connection with their imprisonment and shouting encouragement to the remaining suffragette prisoners who are persisting in their refusal to eat the prison food.

The released suffragettes have enlisted the supporters of their movement in a plan to make public charges against the jailers at Holloway jail. It has been charged several times that the suffragettes attacked the women jailers, and destroyed the furniture in their cells.

The released prisoners today claim that these were only retaliatory measures to resent tortures which were inflicted upon them. Several of the ex-prisoners profess to have been badly hurt in encounters with the jailers. They declare that they were wantonly beaten because of their refusal to eat.

Domestic Trouble Is Fatal.

Cincinnati, O., July 22.—Nelson Tully shot and killed his wife in their home in Latonia, Ky. He then turned the weapon upon himself, inflicting probably fatal injuries. The couple had been separated as the result of domestic troubles. Their two small sons were witnesses to the tragedy.

Makes Successful Flight.

Washington, July 22. — Orville Wright remained in the air 11 minutes on his second flight at Fort Myer and circled the field 12 times, at an average speed of 45 miles an hour. The first flight was a fizzle, the motor stopping on the third round of the field.

WHOLSALE SLAUGHTER

Will Follow the Capture of Town of Melilla.

THAT'S THE BELIEF OF THE SPANIARDS

Ammunition of the Garrison Is Running Short.

Not Thought That the Garrison Has Enough To Withstand Another Attack Like That of Sunday. Moorish Rebels Now Surround the Town — Encamped Only Little Over Mile Away.

San Sebastian, Spain, July 22.—Official messages received here from the beleaguered Spanish garrison at Melilla, in Morocco, declare that the entire town has now been surrounded by the Moorish rebels, whose cordon extends about every section of the beleaguered city at a distance of a mile and a half from the outer works of the Spanish forces.

The ammunition of the besieged troops is running low, and there is hardly more than enough left to withstand another charge of the Moors. The machine guns have been constantly at work since last Saturday, and the firing has been especially heavy with these guns during the wild charges of the tribesmen.

Saving Ammunition.

As a result, General Marinas has given rigid orders to conserve every round of ammunition.

The official messages declare the garrison is in dire straits from this shortage of ammunition, and it is doubtful if it can withstand another fierce assault, such as the one which came as a climax to Sunday's battle.

It is believed that if the tribesmen in rushing the works, there will follow a wholesale slaughter of the Spanish troops, and a general massacre of all found alive in the town. General Marina knows this, and he is prepared to hold out as long as possible. The troops have been ordered to keep their bayonets fixed to be prepared for a hand-to-hand fight in the event the tribesmen succeed in getting into the town.

Other official messages from Melilla are being waited with feverish anxiety, as the downfall of the town is expected at any moment.

THE FINANCIAL RUIN OF SPAIN

Is Threatened by the Campaign in Morocco.

OTHER TRIBESMEN JOINING ATTACK

On Spanish Forces Near Alcazaba de Selmuai.

The Situation, the War Department Holds, May Require the Sending of 60,000 Troops to Morocco—It Is Possible That General Weyler, of Cuban Fame, May Be Placed in Command.

Madrid, July 22.—The Moroccan situation as outlined in despatches received here today, threatens to involve Spain in a financial panic which will mean her ruin.

According to the war department's messages, the Kabylas and the Riff tribesmen are joining for the attack on the Spanish forces near Alcazaba de Selmuai, where General Marinas is stationed. The situation, the war department thinks, will demand that 60,000 troops be sent to Morocco for an extended campaign. This, it is generally understood, will bankrupt Spain.

The country for the past decade has been struggling to rid itself of the burden of debt assumed during the Spanish-American war, and has gradually recovered from what at that time was supposed to be a financial death blow. A period of governmental reconstruction has been going on in Spain, and the energies of the government have been bent toward building up the resources of the country.

Confidence Is Waning.

The partial success which has attended these efforts is now threatened with failure through the Moroccan trouble. Public securities have already begun to slump in the market and confidence in the government is waning.

The general apprehension regarding the financial situation is expected to precipitate a financial panic.

It has been rumored that the Moroccan mission was about to leave Madrid, but the state department officially denies that, saying that the campaign in Morocco is not one of conquest, but is for the purpose of supporting the sultan.

Arrangements are being made by the war department for the sending of further reinforcements to Morocco, and if the situation continues to grow serious, General Weyler will be placed in command of an army of occupation.

Rioting Is Resumed.

Madrid, Spain, July 22.—At least a dozen people were injured in rioting here early today. Troops had been ordered to go forward to the relief of the Melilla garrison. Their families gathered around the railroad depot and openly demonstrated against the government for sending the soldiers to duty in Africa. The police were compelled to charge with their swords and in some cases to use their revolvers. The entire city is in an uproar as the result of the order to send the troops to Africa, and stringest measures are being taken to put down any more disorders.

The first line of reserves have been summoned to the colors and this has added to the hatred of the people, who bitterly oppose the war in Africa.

IOWA FARMERS HELP TOURISTS

Put Roads in Shape for Speeding Glidden Cars.

Council Bluffs, Ia., July 22.—The cars in the Glidden tour automobile contest completed their run from Fort Dodge to this city, after the fastest run to date. Several of the cars hit a rate of 70 miles an hour over the good roads, which in many places had been prepared by farmers.

There were many penalties attached, the reason being the extra fast running done. As much as 15 points were dealt out against three cars. Today's run is to Kearney, Neb., a distance of 186 miles.

Thirty-Two Injured.

St. Petersburg, July 22.—A disastrous fire occurred in the immense chemical works here this afternoon During the progress of the fire a big benzine tank exploded, blowing the roof of the building off. Thirty-two persons were injured.

WOMAN TO SECURE SEAT IN CONGRESS

Woman Suffragists of Colorado Are Planning.

Denver, Col., July 22.—In two years a woman will take a seat in the lower house of congress if plans of the woman's suffragists of Colorado do not fall through.

Sarah Platt Decker, for years president of the general federation of women's clubs, is the candidate selected, and the women have already opened an active campaign in her behalf.

The idea of the women is to combine on Mrs. Decker and by the force of their influence to compel one of the two leading parties to nominate her. If this plan should fail, it is predicted that Mrs. Decker may be a candidate on an independent woman's ticket.

The suffragists believes success on their part in a congressional election would be the signal for the election of many other women to the lower house of congress.

CORNELIUS P. SHEA IS DECLARED GUILTY

Will Be Sentenced for Attempted Murder Friday.

New York, July 22.—Cornelius P. Shea, former president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and in charge of the striking teamsters during the bloody riots in Chicago, was found guilty Wednesday afternoon before Judge Foster in the court of general sessions of attempted murder. Shea was remanded to the Tombs until Friday when he will be sentenced. He can get twenty-five years.

While conducting the Chicago strike, Shea met Alice Walsh, a waitress in a Desplaines street restaurant, and prevailed upon her to accompany him, telling her he was a single man. They lived together for five years. On May 21, 1909, the girl learned that Shea had a wife and several children in Massachusetts, and attempted to leave him. He knocked her down and stabbed her twenty-seven times, inflicting serious wounds. The girl testified against him.

Restoration of Wages.

New York, July 22.—The Erie railroad today announced the restoration of the salaries in force prior to the reduction which followed the financial stringency of 1907. The restoration is general and affects officers and employes all over the Erie system.

FAVORABLE CONDITIONS

Are Awaited by Three Daring Aeronauts,

TO MAKE ATTEMPTS TO CROSS CHANNEL

Keen Rivalry Between the Three Aviators.

M. Bleeriot Will Make the Attempt in His Monoplane at Les Blances, M. Hubert Latham Is Making Ready at Calais and Count de Lambert Is Prepared To Try Wright Machine at Wissant.

Calais, France, July 22.—Three daring aeronants are preparing to risk their lives in efforts to fly across the English channel, in an effort to win the prize of £5,000 offered by the London Daily Mail.

Favorable weather and a dying down of the wind is all that is delaying two of them. M Bleeriot sits by the monoplane at Les Blances while Count de Lambert is waiting at Wissant, momentarily expecting to be able to make the dash across the channel. M. Hubert Latham, whose flight Monday ended in his being thrown into the channel, has had his monoplane repaired and expects to be able to start tomorrow.

There is keen rivalry between these three aviators and they will take almost any kind of a chance. Latham's flight of a few days ago was made in the face of adverse weather conditions, but so anxious was he to make the attempt that he could not wait for good weather.

Latham and Bleeriot both use a monoplane airship, though Bleeriot's is much smaller than the one used by Latham. Count de Lambert has two of the aeroplanes made by the Wright brothers and he is confident that his machines have more stability and flying power than the monoplanes.

PATTEN CLEARS FOUR MILLIONS

Wheat Deals Since January 1 Are Profitable.

ABOUT TO QUIT WHEAT PIT AGAIN

His Sellings Wednesday Are Taken To Mean That.

It Is Thought That He Has About Cleaned Up on July Wheat and Will Again Go to Some Western Resort and Recuperate — Also Makes a Clean-Up in Cotton. Comment on Market.

Chicago, July 22.—Brokers stated here today they believed James A. Patten's enormous sales of wheat yesterday indicate he is about ready to quit the pit again for another rest. The fact that he disposed of 4,000,000 bushel of July is taken to mean that he has now "cleaned out" all the wheat he had on hand and will sojourn at some western resort until he is ready for his next campaign.

Patten's profits since the first of the year are estimated today at $4,000,000 at least. In the past few days he has cleared about $750,000 and has caught the market "coming and going." Last week he forced the price of July to $1.29 and then sold 2,000,000 bushels at a profit of from five to twenty cents a bushel. During the succeeding week Patten kept selling at various prices all the way down to $1.20 and yesterday he dumped his 4,000,000 bushels on the market at between $1.16 and $1.18½.

Patten has also been "cleaning up" in cotton. His sales yesterday were 10,000 bales at a profit of five dollars a bale. This represents only a small part of his cotton holdings.

The feeling at the opening was that if Patten really is out of July, he got out just in time. From the very outset, enormous quantities of wheat were offered for sale and as a result prices started a rapid downward movement.

July wheat, which closed yesterday at 1.15⅝, opened at 1.14¾, and then dropped suddenly to 1.13⅛. September and December both fell off, but not so violently as July. Meanwhile, wheat continued to pour into the pit from all sections of the country.

PLUCKY SHERIFF FOILS ANGRY MOB

Saves Negro's Neck by Wild Dash in an Auto.

Atlanta, Ga., July 22.—Sheriff McKinney and three deputies with drawn revolvers faced a mob of 1,000 angry men at Vinnings, Ga., and saved the life of Will Webb, a negro, charged with criminal assault. Webb had just been identified by Mrs. Exie Brown as the negro who assaulted her.

He had not yet left Mrs. Brown's residence after the identification when the mob surrounded the house. Out came the revolvers of the four officers, and with a rush they charged through the mob and leaped into a big automobile which they had in waiting. Leveling their revolvers upon the mob leaders, they drove out of danger and rushed the negro to Atlanta.

THREE MEN SHOT IN KENOSHA RIOT

Trouble Starts While a Conference Is in Progress.

Kenosha, Wis., July 22.—The strike in the N. R. Allen & Sons tannery today resulted in a riot in which three men were shot.

The officials of the tannery were in conference with a committee of strikers when the riot took place at about 8 o'clock. The strikers attacked the special police ,and special deputy sheriffs set to guard the plant and the three wounded men were shot during the melee.

Two Killed by Train.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 22.—Samuel King was instantly killed and Tony Vitz fatally hurt in a collision between a westbound Michigan Central train and a wagon, two miles east of this city, today. King was driving and, despite the warning of a flagman, tried to cross in front of the train. The wagon was demolished and the two men were hurled fifty feet.

Adelaide Keim has been doing fine work in Milwaukee.

RESOURCES OF THE BANKS OF CLEVELAND

Double Those of Cincinnati, Toledo and Columbus Combined.

Columbus, July 22.—Returns to State Bank Superintendent Seymour show that the resources of the Cleveland banks are more than double those of Cincinnati, Toledo and Columbus combined. All the cities show gains in the resources as compared with the report of six months ago. A singular fact is that while the Cincinnati banks have much smaller resources than those of Cleveland the clearing-house business of the former city is larger than that of the latter.

FIRE DEPARTMENT IS INEXPENSIVE

The Department at Wellston a Big Success.

Columbus, July 22.—In the city of Wellston no one kicks on what it costs to run the fire department. The department consists of one man—Chief Finley Dureau—and he has charge of the central station and one sub station. Whenever there is a fire he drafts a number of citizens into the service these are each paid $1.50 for each fire they attend. Economically and otherwise, according to State Examiner Will E. Heck, the department is a success.

FREIGHT TRAIN HITS CARRIAGE

Woman and Two Children Dead as a Result.

Columbus, Miss., July 22.—Miss Ida Holloway, her sister, Mrs. Anne Myers, and two children were killed today in a collision between a carriage in which they were riding and a freight train on the Mobile & Ohio railroad near Columbus. Matthew Holloway, a farmer, was driving. He drove on the tracks just after the train, which was moving slow, had passed. The train stopped and backed suddenly, the caboose striking the carriage.

ARRAIGNED FOR SAYLER MURDER

All of the Four Prisoners Plead Not Guilty.

NO REQUEST FOR CHANGE OF VENUE

Nor Is There Any Attempt at Violence.

Dr. Miller, Mrs. Sayler and John Grunden Are Indicted on Fourteen Counts Charging Them with Murder—One Count Charges Miller with Murder and the Others as Accessories.

Watseka, Ill., July 22.—Dr. Miller, Mrs. John B. Sayler and John and Ira Grunden, indicted yesterday on charges of murdering John B. Sayler, the banker, in his home at Crescent City, Illinois, July 11, were arraigned before Judge Hoover here this morning. An immense crowd was in the court-room, but no violence was offered the accused, despite the strong feeling against them in Crescent City.

When court convened it was expected that the defendants would all plead not guilty, and that the court would determine whether the cases would go over to the regular term of court or a special session of court would be called. It was also expected that counsel for the defense would enter a motion for a change of venue. Owing to the feeling in this county it is believed such a motion would be granted.

No such motion was made, however. A motion to quash the indictments being overruled, the prisoners were served with copies and a motion to continue the case to the November term was sustained.

Miller, Mrs. Sayler and John Grunden were indicted on fourteen counts charging them with murder. Ira Grunden was indicted as an accessory after the fact. One count in the indictment charges that Miller committed the murder alone and that Mrs. Sayler and John Grunden had aided and abetted him. Ira Grunden's bail was fixed at $10,000, which he was unable to furnish.

A great man never has time to wait for an audience and he never needs to.

CLOUDBURST HITS DULUTH

Property Damage of Million and a Half Dollars.

THREE LIVES KNOWN TO HAVE BEEN LOST

Streets of City Metamorphosed into Rivers.

Following a Rainfall of Two and Three-Fifths Inches Wednesday Night Comes a Fall of Three Inches in Two Hours, Transforming the "Zenith City of the Unsalted Seas" into a Venice.

Duluth, Minn., July 22.—Many streets are flooded and street car traffic is paralyzed today as the result of the cloudburst which struck Duluth late last night and continued into the early hours of the morning, causing $1,500,000 damage.

In less than two hours nearly three inches of rain fell and this following so closely upon a rainfall of 2 3-5 inches Monday night converted down town streets into streams.

So suddenly did the water rush in that many persons driving automobiles were compelled to abandon their machines in the streets. Basements are flooded everywhere, several downtown stores having from four to eight feet of water in their basements.

When the storm burst the water rushed into a local theater where a performance was in progress, and a panic was prevented only by the presence of mind of the theater employes.

Some Life Loss.

That three lives were lost in the downpour of rain last night was revealed today. Two boys, named Domano, were drowned on First street, and a third child aged, ten, name not known, perished on Keens creek, in West Duluth.

The damage is pricipally to streets, supplies of goods in stores and railroads.

Keens creek in West Duluth has swept away thirty dwellings along its banks.

All train schedules in this locality are demoralized. Earth and rocks were piled several feet high on Superior street, the main street of the town this morning, and a large force of men is carrying away the debris.

A CROWDED CAR TURNS TURTLE

After a Wild Wash Down a Steep Grade.

Pottsville, Pa., July 22.—After a wild dash down a steep grade a special trolley car carrying half a hundred Elks turned turtle at the foot of the hill early today. Scarcely one of the passengers escaped without injury and five were seriously hurt. They were: Thomas B. Golden, Pottsville, leg crushed, later amputated, cut about the head; Bargo Weidman, Pottsville, should broken, scalp torn; George W. Bower, Easton, fractured collarbone, back injured; James Ernst, Easton, head cut, back and legs injured, and Irvin Paul Bangor, head cut and pelvis fractured.

The crowded car had started down a long steep grade on the Tumbling Run branch of the Eastern Pennsylvania railroad, when the motorman discovered that the airbrake would not work. The hand brake was powerless to control the heavy car, and it dashed to the botton, where it left the track and turned over.

FALLIERES NAMES BRIAND PREMIER

Paris, July 22. — M. Aristide Briand, Socialist deputy, has been appointed premier by President Fallieres to succeed Premier Clemenceau and has accepted the portfolio. He will, he has announced, make few, if any changes in the cabinet, as it was organized under Clemenceau. Clemenceau leaves Saturday for Carlsbad in Austria to take the cure there.

Brakeman and Engineer Dead.

Camden, N. J., July 22.—The absence of a flagman at the crossing of the West Jersey and Seashore railroad, and the Central Railroad of New Jersey, north of Bridgeton Junction, was the cause of a freight wreck early today that cost the lives of Engineer Peacock and Brakeman Harry Heintz of the West Jersey road. Both men were instantly killed.

last night's record-breaking flight of one hour, twenty minutes and forty-five seconds. Orville Wright is today preparing for the officials trials, according to the specifications laid down by the signal corps of the army. These are: An endurance flight of one hour and a supposed flight of ten miles along a straight-away course of five miles and return.

Although there is some difference of opinion as to whether the specifications require the presence of two persons in the aeroplane during these official flights, it is understood that Orville will not stand upon technicalities, and that he will take one of the signal corps officers, probably Lieutenant Foulois, with him. It is possible that he may attempt the endurance test this afternoon. He is allowed three trials on each proposition.

The fact that Orville is a real human being, widely known and the critics have doubted, was demonstrated last night, when, after he had been flying fifty-three minutes and therefore had beaten the record of his American competitor, Glean H. Curtiss, he began to cut didoes in the air. Three times, successively, he made figure-eights over the parade ground, the first he had attempted since last fall. It was simply his way of telling the crowd of 5,000 people below that "there are others." Having given Curtiss something to think about, Orville resumed his customary dignity and thereafter did not swerve from his usual right to left oblong course.

In all, the machine traveled as far as from Washington to Baltimore. As Wilbur Wright expressed it afterwards, it was equivalent to flying over the English channel and back again without stopping

HURLED 650 FEET TO THEIR DEATHS

Awful Fate of a Blacksmith and His Helper.

Scranton, Pa., July 21.—By the jolting of a carriage on which they stood while making repairs to a steam wheel at the top of the breaker, Charles Lewis, blacksmith, and his helper, John Hall, were hurled 650 feet to death last night in Storr's No. 2 shaft. The bodies of the men were terribly mutilated, every bone in their bodies being broken.

Lewis leaves a wife and family of six children. Hall is also survived by a family.

Buys Telephone Plant.

Tiffin, O. July 21.—The plant of the Tiffin Home Telephone company was sold by Judge J. C. Royer, the receiver, to E. Bruce Myers of Tiffin for $30,500. The home plant was thrown into the hands of the receiver in May as a result of heavy damage done in the February flood, making it impossible to pay fixed charges.

and the coast of Mexico. Here the shipwrecked sailors were unable to find a single article of food. Three days after they landed, however, Captain Burke in traveling about the island discovered a bed of shellfish and on those the men lived for ten days. Harry Nordreck, cook of the schooner, had succumbed before the discovery of the food. The men gave his body to the sea which was seen from the island of Madre-Marie, from where a boat was sent out to them. The rescued found four of the men unconscious, and the others little better off. They were taken to Madre Marie, where they were picked up by the Newport

Dies of Being Mother to Five Little Ones.

Reed City, Mich., July 21.—Coroner Grant completed his investigation today of the death of fifteen-year-old Minnie Schmidt, reporting that the girl shot herself through the breast with a shotgun yesterday because she was "tired of life."

The Schmidt family was left motherless three years ago. Since then Minnie has been mother to the five younger Schmidts and her father testified that she did all of the house work on the farm but never complained. Her desperate plan of escape from it all, the coroner believed, proved too tired of it she was

To Which Port She Flees To Escape Arrest.

A Wireless from the Alliance Tells of an Attempt on Her Part To Commit Suicide Enroute Back. Story Told by Three Young Girls Leads to the Arrest of the Woman. The Girls' Story.

New York, July 22 New York police are today hearing further news from the six-time, Alliance on board which Helen Spencer is being brought a prisoner from Panama to answer the charge of conducting a [illegible] Escanite terms as "white slaves" between New York and the canal zone. A transcript of a wireless message picked up early today from the vessel, which is now in the North Carolina coast states that the woman had made an attempt to kill herself, but came to and did not say whether she had succeeded.

The New York police want to see Miss Spencer and all of the girls on board the vessel again shortly. Inspector Hallet declared that the woman had an apartment in New York and another apparently house in Panama and that she was going to or from New York. Her arrest was brought about by the girls giving information against her. Inez Patterson, Mary Jerome and Marie Nevins, all with ambition to appear on the stage

Tells of Great Chances.

Miss Spencer, it is charged, told them there are glittering chances for them in the Navajo, in Panama City. She furnished them transportation and visited them in large cities to go there, declaring the place was a variety house. On the steamer, Ormoco, on which they went to the canal zone, the girls said they were to report to Colon Cherel, who told them the Navajo was a notorious resort

The girls' story aroused pity, and they were sent back to the states and required to take out warrant for the woman.

Miss Spencer heard of the warrant and fled. She was arrested in Guayaquil, Ecuador, on July 10, and is being brought back by a New York detective

The police are anxious to know the ramifications of the "white slave" traffic and to have Miss Spencer can be made to tell of it if she is brought back here alive.

ACCEPTANCE BY THE PRESIDENT

Is Prompt and Without Semblance of Question.

Trouble Starts When Attempt Is Made To Give Government Vote of Confidence After Hot Debate Over Recent Investigations into Naval Scandals—Socialists Are Pleased Over Retirement of Clemenceau.

Paris, July 21.—Premier Clemenceau and his entire cabinet tendered their resignations to President Fallieres, and the same were accepted.

The fall of the cabinet came as a climax to a session in the chamber of deputies of the investigation recently held into the department of marine, which was strongly condemned in the special commission's report. On a vote of confidence in the government, the vote stood 376 in favor and 212 opposed.

M. Clemenceau and his fellow ministers immediately left the chamber. The premier proceeded directly to President Fallieres and offered his resignation, which the president accepted.

The fall of the cabinet was so unexpected that the political world is completely at sea as to who will be Clemenceau's successor. The name of Leon Bourgeois, former premier and former minister of foreign affairs, is most frequently mentioned, but his age and health are against him.

The Socialists naturally are overjoyed at Clemenceau's downfall. M. Jaures, the Socialist leader in the chamber, said "With Clemenceau disappears the most dangerous man in the republic."

Except for children, rest, the household bills and where it is best for the family to live, marriage is not such a great failure.

WIFE PROVIDES RUNS BODY OF Splits Baby's Head Open and Kills Wife's Mother and Sister.

Morelia, Mex., July 21.—Because his wife from whom he was separated, refused to return to him, Serafin Magdaleo Gomez, of the Fifth Military zone, broke in with his sword. Then becoming maddened by the sight of blood he attacked his infant child, splitting its head open. With the same weapon he killed the mother and sister of his young wife when they rushed into the room where the tragedy occurred.

The wife and child had been making their home with the former's mother Refugio Gomez, since the separation of the couple and repeated invitations of the husband to effect a reconciliation drove him to desperation.

A girl takes it for granted that if she was much prettier she couldn't help being a little vain about it.

Trouble Starts When Attempt Is Made To Give Government Vote of Confidence After Hot Debate Over Recent Investigations into Naval Scandals—Socialists Are Pleased Over Retirement of Clemenceau.

Paris, July 21.—Premier Clemenceau and his entire cabinet tendered their resignations to President Fallieres, and the same were accepted.

The fall of the cabinet came as a climax to a session in the chamber of deputies of the investigation recently held into the department of marine, which was strongly condemned in the special commission's report. On a vote of confidence in the government, the vote stood 376 in favor and 212 opposed.

M. Clemenceau and his fellow ministers immediately left the chamber. The premier proceeded directly to President Fallieres and offered his resignation, which the president accepted.

The fall of the cabinet was so unexpected that the political world is completely at sea as to who will be Clemenceau's successor. The name of Leon Bourgeois, former premier and former minister of foreign affairs, is most frequently mentioned, but his age and health are against him.

The Socialists naturally are overjoyed at Clemenceau's downfall. M. Jaures, the Socialist leader in the chamber, said "With Clemenceau disappears the most dangerous man in the republic."

Except for children, rest, the household bills and where it is best for the family to live, marriage is not such a great failure.

RUNS BODY OF WIFE THROUGH

Splits Baby's Head Open and Kills Wife's Mother and Sister.

Morelia, Mex., July 21.—Because his wife from whom he was separated, refused to return to him, Serafin Magdaleo Gomez, of the Fifth Military zone, broke in with his sword. Then becoming maddened by the sight of blood he attacked his infant child, splitting its head open. With the same weapon he killed the mother and sister of his young wife when they rushed into the room where the tragedy occurred.

The New York police want to see Miss Spencer and all of the girls on board the vessel again shortly. The police are anxious to know the ramifications of the "white slave" traffic and to have Miss Spencer can be made to tell of it if she is brought back here alive.

FIFTY TRUE BILLS AGAINST OFFENDERS

Violators of Law Are Struck a Hard Blow.

GRAND JURY STRIKES ALL FORMS OF VICE

Graft, Gambling, Disorderly Resorts, Slot Machines and the Illegal Selling of Liquor in Dry Territory Surrounding Chicago—More Than 300 Persons Under Indictment.

Chicago, July 22.—Graft, gambling, disorderly resorts, slot machines and the illegal sale of liquor in dry territories surrounding Chicago, was struck a hard blow, Wednesday, when the grand jury returned indictments affecting more than 300 persons.

Fifty true bills were returned against proprietors of clothes, gambling houses and a like number against persons operating slot machines.

Frank Moy, who is said to have been collecting money from gambling houses for providing them with "protection" and Ed King, his agent, were also indicted as accessories in the fifty indictments against Chinese gamblers.

Moy, who is "mayor of Chinatown" denied he was levying tribute from gamblers, declaring he was merely collecting a fund to celebrate "the feast of the war god."

The grand jury, after reporting true bill's immediately reconvened and started an investigation in an effort to discover the persons who furnished the alleged "protection." The state's attorney is said to be preparing to prosecute police officials.

THE POLITICAL REFORM OF SECRETARY NAGEL

We like that man, Secretary Nagel, at the head of the department of commerce and labor. Nagel is no pretender, but he is a performer. Without making any noise except that which sounds like a man of honesty and purpose doing things, Secretary Nagel is spreading rout and retreat among worthless pap-suckers at the public teat, and is rendering more reformation in administrative affairs than a thousand loud-shouting, gaze-on-me reformers ever do. Somewhere we read in the Washington news that Secretary Nagel catalogued a hundred clerks in his department, who were not earning their liberal salaries, reduced their pay, told them they must earn what they get or hike out, then told a dozen or more incompetents that he would enjoy reading their resignations. That's what we call really reforming things. This is making public position a place of service instead of a private snap. More Nagels are needed in Washington, and in every state of the union. This waste of public funds on useless political appointees is not peculiar to party, nor limited in locality. It prevails in states as well as nation, and in municipalities, too. It outrages the South as well as North, and tempts the snap-hunters of the West as well as the East. It is the chronic political illness of the age, and requires surgery, sometimes heroic surgery at that. It takes in many who are pretending highest political righteousness. We recall that one of the Kansas senators of today, with that sensitive conscience that makes him call himself progressive—and he pretended so beautifully that it landed him in office—only three years ago was urging his own appointment to "some good federal job that would pay six or seven thousand a year, and still leave him the bulk of his time to look after his urgent business affairs at home." It sounds like fiction, but the correspondence proves it. Yet the late Kansas progressive reformation swept him into the senate.

Millions and millions of public monies are wasted on useless, so-called public servants. Commissions, statisticians, deputies, specialists and what not, are added to public pay rolls, municipal, state and national, to pay political debts, contracted without value received, by the party in power, until the waste on worthlessness, in the grand total, is beyond all belief. The standing and the capabilities of men seeking such places are often so high that the public is disarmed, and only those are wise to the legalized plunder who see the loafing on the job. Most executive officials do not approve, perhaps, but in most instances they do not know. The politicians, hunting rewards for the faithful, are the men who are purposely blind to the growing abuse.

We have it in Ohio. We had a striking example in two oil inspectors, at enormous salaries, when one was ample at one-fourth the compensation. A Republican house grew good enough to strike for reform when a Democratic governor was elected, and the Democratic senate assented, though reluctant to discard the plum. The same Democratic senate, no better or worse than Republican predecessors, criticized the previous pay roll made up of legislative employes, then to prove the weakness of politicians, increased the list. We need a wholesale reduction in Ohio. Governor Harmon doubtless means well, but his eye is on the presidency, and while looking so far ahead he will miss a hundred timely economies possible to his administration. Ohio is not worse and no better than other states. It is a widespread political abuse. Let us hope that Secretary Nagel's example in Washington will be largely imitated there, and that reformation will reach to the states. The change is due. It will be a revision downwards that the people will applaud.

The ways of some courts are past finding out. Over in Indianapolis, the other day, an itinerant preacher blew into town with a family of five children. One of the children appealed to the authorities for protection, alleging that the father beat them brutally on the slightest provocation. The police investigated the story, and found it true. Thereupon the police judge fixed up matters by driving the man and his family out of town where the cries of the children will not disturb the ears of the city Hoosiers. Oh, sapient judge!

INVENTION OF ICE-CREAM AND THE BEST EVER MADE

Somewhere we have seen a current inquiry as to who invented ice-cream. A contributor to the Commercial Tribune says Dolly Madison introduced it in this country, and the statement is undisputed, but ice-cream was known to the well-to-do Romans in the days of greatest Roman glory, and the Egyptians have left references that suggest they ate it before the Romans, though we are left wondering where they got their ice. The Star can offer no light, but we do know where the best ice-cream in the world was once made. It was right over in Caledonia, and contained no cream at all! The parish barn was the scene, when Rev. Chauncey Baldwin stirred the shouting Methodists. One lad furnished the ice, another the milk, still another the sugar for sweetening and the ice for the salt, and yet another the eggs and flavoring extract. Perhaps a fifth borrowed the freezer and a sixth gathered up the spoons and saucers—note we say saucers—from mother's cupboard. Maybe there were more, some one or two furnishing lemonade, and all taking a hand at cranking the freezer. It was hot work in a hay loft, but that enhanced the later enjoyment of the frozen "cream." More, the quantity was ample, and the consumers were boys. That's why it was the best ice-cream in the world

ROSE LAW ENFORCEMENT WILL BE MAINTAINED.

The prosecution of the Rose law violators is interesting all of Marion. This fair city is not to be surrendered to the defiance of law. The people will not submit to boot-legging and booze-bartering. The legalized saloons were voted out because they flagrantly ignored the law, and no sneaking successors and alley purveyors are to be allowed to continue in their places.

We are not alluding to specific cases, either of conviction or dismissal. The enforcement of the dry verdict of the people is going to be a live issue so long as that is popular preference, and we are sure that period will extend two years from next November. If, at that time, the people want to restore the saloons, they may exist legally after a wet majority vote is recorded. Until then, Marion is to be a dry city and a dry county, and the public sentiment that makes and enforces law will make it essentially dry, rather than in name merely. The enforcement of popular will is sure to be the issue in the city election, and the next mayor of Marion will be honestly committed to the maintenance of the dry rule. No other kind of a candidate can be elected. Moreover, if there comes a time when dereliction of public duty offends the sober sense of the community there will be impeachment.

We do not reasonably expect conviction on every charge. It is not in the nature of things. We have seen murderers go free, time and again, at the hands of honest juries, though the killing by the accused was not even disputed. This much is to be remembered by those who grieve at every acquittal.

The important thing just now is an understanding of a sane, deliberate, popular intent in Marion. It must be grasped by public officials and offenders. Everybody knows the Rose law is being flagrantly and continuously violated in Marion. The great majority of Marion people might not be able to testify to specific violation, but there is that unmistakable general feeling that whisky is sold more largely than in the day of the open saloon. The quantity is larger and the quality poorer. The deluded consumer does not seem to realize that the agent of outlawry would little scruple to dope or attenuate the liquors he sells. We have merely shifted the scene from the barroom to the tiger's lair, from the tolerable saloon to the hidden hole. Drunks, temporarily diminished under the early period of dry rule, have ranged back to the old numbers again and one unmolested dealer in forbidden goods has been quoted as saying that he could pay a dozen fines and still experience a saving of the burden imposed by the Dow tax.

All this speaks bad'y of Marion, offends the public sense and is stirring a popular determination that will be felt in no uncertain way. Unhappily the situation intimates official tolerance. Police interference, except on sworn complaint, is a most unknown. It is ridiculous to say the police force of Marion is not wise to violations. If the police do not know they are incompetent and are no earning the salaries they draw. These officers should be serving the public. That is what they are paid for. There will be cases doubtless where offenders can only be caught by detectives, but an unalterable policy of vigorous enforcement and conscientiously vigilant work by the police would make the city essentially dry, as the majority voted it to be. There is nothing else to do that is worthy of consideration.

There are conditions in some cities that might excuse a little laxness. In Springfield, Ohio, where a county voted dry but the city voted wet by two or three thousand majority, there is the so called argument that lies in a municipal majority against enforcement. The argument is invalid, however, for the county is the legal unit, and in Springfield there has recently arisen the good example of a dozen or more ex-saloon-keepers stepping to the front and giving their pledges of honor in joining a rigid enforcement movement.

The Star has no patience with the ultra-extremists—the fanatics who would pursue a case of beer to the private home and forbid its consumption there. They are in part responsible for this laxness that offends in trafficking contrary to law. We are writing of the public preference and trustworthy opinion which is the dependable sentiment of the community. It is hostile to bootlegging and blind-tigers, it is annoyed by the numerous, undeniable violations, and is moving toward a reign of law. We are writing fair warning. Marion is going to retain its fair name, and demand respect for the law.

THE NEED OF PAINT ON FARM DWELLINGS

Aside from the ravages of the storms, which recently leveled the oats and knocked down the waving corn, thus transforming beautiful fields into acres of disappointment, the country presents a beautiful harvest picture. Everywhere, in every direction, are evidences of agricultural prosperity and improved conditions on the farm. The reflex of dollar wheat and seventy-five-cent corn, and attending price elevations, is seen on every side. Farm values have taken the upward flight until a good farm at less than a hundred an acre is an unknown quantity. If you hear of one at less, you may well inquire as to what is lacking. The soil is thin, the drainage is inadequate—something is wrong. But in spite of prosperity and the upward trend, in spite of farm luxuries and marked betterments, there is still apparent a great scarcity of paint. We mean the applied article. Why is it the farmers do not keep their homes better painted? One may drive along any of our traveled pikes and count scores of houses on rich and attractive farms that are so thirsting for the painter's preserving and beautifying brush that they offend the eye. Even where dooryards have been turned to attractive lawns, and there are abundant signs of thrift, weather-beaten houses stand paintless and shameless, when a few dollars' worth of paint would instantly beautify and double the years of their endurance. If the Star might have the say as to what to do to improve country homes in Marion county, we should cry out to paint, and paint and paint. Some farmers look after their barns better than their dwelling-houses, but barns are very often neglected. When you see a great stretch of barn or barns, neglected in painting, you instantly argue that there is a farmer who has builded more than he can care for.

Paint is cheap, and its application not expensive, and applied paint is worth its cost, threefold. We write in the hope of improvement. Ours is a beautiful county, with its full quota of attractive farm homes. A little more paint, or a lot more, and we will compare appearances with any in Ohio. Our soil is as rich as any. The plains to the north and northwest are good to look upon, and the rolling stretches south and southeast are as pretty as boisterous scenery in the hill and valley sections. Our farmers are as well to do, better than the average. A little more pride in dwelling-houses, just enough to urge painting, and we may invite comparison with anybody in Ohio. Things are not as they used to be. Thousands of people are enjoying cross-country tours. The wise tourist dodges the better paths. He keeps within reach, but drives the piked by-roads in preference. He is making note and talking about us. We should like to see Marion county spruce up a bit and be somewhere equal to possibilities. Paint will help a mighty lot.

Near Easton, Pennsylvania, a railroad section man attempted to dig a charge of dynamite out of the ground with a pick, a day or two ago, the result being seven funerals. So long as workmen persist in using a pick on dynamite there is bound to be prosperity for the undertakers.

The proposed pensioning of old maids by states, the Chicago Tribune holds, would bankrupt New England. Just as though any old maid would admit she were.

In every civilized country of the world, man of the highest culture and learning paused last week to pay tribute to Simon Newcomb, the world-famed astronomer, whose funeral at Washington was attended by the president and the dignitaries of this and the representatives of other governments. Professor Newcomb's fame is secure, but the greatest benefits to humanity that come from his career will not be found in the sum he has added to human knowledge, but in the lesson his life has taught—that opportunity comes to every boy, no matter how poor and lowly he may be, and that as he himself worked upward from the obscurity of the woodchopper, so any lad in this country may attain any goal upon which he sets his heart if he will but labor earnestly and intelligently to reach it.

A Chicago man placed a book of poems which had never been given circulation in a cornerstone. Harmless, of course, unless future generations should judge the present by cornerstone poetry.

The style of southern lynchings has changed. Where, in the past, they were conducted boisterously by the "best people of the place," they are now pulled off in a quiet and unostentatious manner.

The Star is in receipt of the formal announcement of the candidacy of John L. Sullivan, of Auglaize county, for the Republican nomination for secretary of state. The nominations are a year away and there may be a host of candidates for this honor when the time rolls around. If they are all like this one the party cannot go wrong. Sullivan is distinctly all right. He has been running an aggressively partisan paper in a hopelessly Democratic county and making his subscribers like it. As a fighter, he can give the other John L. all the high cards in the deck and win hands down. He was a printer, and a good one, and knows how to work and direct the work of others. As state supervisor of printing he has given the most effective and economical administration of the office in its history. He stands by his friends and meets his enemies—he has only political ones—squarely, face to face. He is honest and capable. We hope all the candidates for this and other places on the ticket measure up to the same standard.

FINDING AS TO THE DEATH OF A WOMAN

What Causes the Death of Mrs. John Cramer.

CORONER'S AGENTS EXONERATE SAGER

Find No Evidence of Narcotic Poisoning—Dr. J. B. Taylor Makes a Statement as to the Death of Mrs. John Cramer—Supported by the Opinions of Four Physicians.

Drs. H. J. Lower and C. G. Smith, who were employed by Coroner W. H. Hinklin to perform an autopsy on the body of Mrs. John Cramer, whose sudden death, Monday, was ascribed to narcotic poisoning by Dr. J. B. Taylor, gave out the following statement for publication, Thursday:

"Mrs. John Cramer's death was not due to narcosis. Chemical analysis does not reveal that Mrs. Cramer died of narcotic poisoning. The morphoneutical testings did not respond when the most delicate test was applied following a careful and complete chemical separation of the specimen given Drs. Lower and Smith. The only result of the autopsy microscopical examination and lastly the chemical analysis is an absolute contradiction to the statement that Mrs. Cramer died of narcotic poisoning. This justly exonerates Dr. H. W. Sager, the attending physician, from any blame, and it is our belief that he did all that could be done for her. We get from the history of Mrs. Cramer that she was a very nervous woman, and that subsequent to the death of her father, she had four attacks similar to the one which caused her death."

Dr. Sager, whom Drs. Lower and Smith absolve from any blame in connection with the young woman's death, had treated her for nervous trouble. She died after taking one capsule and three tablets given to her by her husband, who says that Dr. Sager gave them to him and that he followed his directions.

Dr. Taylor, who signed Mrs. Cramer's death certificate and gave drug narcosis as the cause of death, when informed that Drs. Lower and Smith declared that narcotic poisoning had nothing to do with it, dictated the following:

"I have not been making war against Dr. Sager at all, and there is little use to say anything, but if the woman didn't die of narcotic poisoning, then what caused her death? Drs. Smith and Lower don't tell.

"Mrs. Cramer had every symptom of narcotic poisoning. That is the opinion of our doctors. When I was called in I said right away that she was poisoned. Then Dr. A. Rhu was called. I did not say a word as to what I thought caused her death, but Dr. Rhu said at once that she was poisoned. Dr. A. M. Crane was called later and when he examined the woman, he said, 'Why, this woman's been poisoned.' Dr. Hedges said the same thing.

"When the autopsy was held we were not invited. Dr. Hinklin, as coroner, knew that we would be interested. I got a message that an autopsy was to be held at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. I called up Drs. Rhu, Crane and Hedges and we went uninvited. We were present when Drs. Smith and Lower made the examination. There was no disease of the heart or anything. How can they know better what caused her death than four physicians, who saw her before she died with the sights of her eyes drawn to pin points, her lips and nails purple and her breath coming only three or four times a minute? That indicates poison. It does not make any difference whether morphine killed her or not, but she died from some drug."

When asked from what part of the woman's body a chemical test had been made, Dr. Lower stated that one of the kidneys had been used.

A woman doesn't really begin to have faith in a man until other people lose it.

HUDSON TERMINAL, NEW YORK; W. G. M'ADOO, WHO EVOLVED IT

With the opening of the downtown tubes of the Hudson & Manhattan railway, New York City, a new epoch in the progress of the metropolis comes at a stride. Trains run from the New Jersey side of the Hudson river to the new terminal at Cortlandt and Church streets in three minutes. The advantage which this means of entering the city gives the Pennsylvania railroad and other lines is obvious. It is estimated that 100,000,000 passengers will pass through the tubes annually. The accompanying illustration contains a portrait of William G. McAdoo, who solved this mighty problem of tunneling the Hudson.

THOMAS MURPHY IS KILLED ON BIG FOUR

Is Caught While Making a Coupling and Both Legs Are Cut Off—Quick Action of His Fellow-Workers Fails of Result—Some Local Railroad Notes and News.

Thomas Murphy, a freight conductor on the Big Four, lost his life, Wednesday afternoon, as the result of injuries received while attempting to make a coupling in his train at Grafton. Murphy's accident was soon noticed and the entire train crew rushed to his assistance. Both legs were severed between the knee and hip. While the trainmen picked him up and placed him in the caboose, the engine crew detached the engine from the train, after clearing the main track, picked up the caboose and made a dash for Cleveland. The forty miles was covered in less than an hour. Murphy was taken to the Charity hospital where he died in a short time. All the way to Cleveland he was conscious and complained but little of his suffering. He fully realized that his chances for recovery were slight, but he never lost hope. The deceased is a son of William Murphy, a Big Four passenger conductor, who is also well known here.

The employes of the Wells Fargo & Company's express and their families and a few friends enjoyed the third annual picnic, Wednesday afternoon and evening, at Lincoln park. During the afternoon a ball game was played, but Agent Gabler states that he ran out of figures keeping the score, so there is no accurate account of the final result. A fine picnic supper was served, after which dancing and other pastimes were enjoyed.

The Hocking Valley transferred a train-load of soldiers to the Erie, Thursday. The soldiers were members of the Second regiment of the state guard and were on their way to Fort Sheridan at Leavenworth, Kansas, for a week's encampment. W. H. Hartsough accompanied the train to this point, as representative of the Hocking Valley passenger department. O. L. Enos, took charge of the train over his line.

HE RETURNS FOR A LAST LOOK AT THE OLD HOME

An Unusual Caller at the Detwiler Home.

BROKEN IN HEALTH, BUT NOT IN PURSE

Emaciated Stranger Is Given Welcome and a Drink from the Fountain of His Youth—Refuses To Give His Name—Older Residents Think They Recognize Him.

"You may think me odd, but I was born in this little old house fifty-three years ago. May I come in and see the old rooms again? I have come 4,000 miles just to see this place and get a last drink out of the old well."

A sad-faced, emaciated man, his once broad shoulders drooping from his disease-racked body, stood, hat in hand, before the front door at the Frank C. Detwiler home, No. 693 south Prospect street, Monday afternoon, and thus addressed Mrs. Detwiler when she responded to his rap.

"You see, I never expect to see the old place again and I've come here for a last look," the man continued, his voice trembling with the emotion of by-gones.

Mrs. Detwiler threw wide the door. "Come in," she said, touched by the pathetic appeal she read in the mysterious visitor's tear-dimmed eyes.

"Here's where I was born," and the visitor pointed to the parlor room. "There is the old stairway. Say, I've fallen down those stairs many a time." He smiled the smile of youth as recollection pushed back the portals of memory and time faded into the pleasant past. He noted the few slight changes made in the architecture, but seemed pleased to know that the house, for the most part, appeared the same as it did when he lived in it. He said:

"Now, give me a drink out of the old well and I'll go. You mustn't think I am poor in a money sense, for I have plenty. For thirty-three years I have been prospecting for gold in the West. I have made a fortune. My health is broken and my doctor said I must go to Florida, but I could not go without a glimpse of the old place again. No, I do not care to reveal my identity. I don't want any one to know."

As he drank from the cup at the old well, Mrs. Detwiler offered to give her strange guest a picture of the house. "No, thank you," he waved his slender white hand. "I don't want it; I want to forget, I want to forget after I leave."

Before departing the stranger inquired about many of the older residents of the city and said that he had left here thirty-three years ago for the West, but declined to say anything more concerning himself. In spite of his reticence as to his identity, old residents of the neighborhood declare that the visitor was a son of George Barnett, who built the house now owned by Mr. Detwiler a carpenter.

SEVERAL ARRESTS ON BOOTLEGGING CHARGES

W. E. Stillwell Files Affidavits in Prospect Court.

WARRANTS ISSUED BY PROSPECT MAYOR

Accused Men with One Exception Appear To Answer to Charges and Dates Are Fixed for Hearings. Charles Miller Appeared in Court Thursday Morning.

Wilbert E. Stillwell filed affidavits in the court of Mayor Huff, at Prospect, Tuesday, charging John K. Forsythe, Michael J. Burke, P. H. Neidig, William Klehm, Charles Miller and Fred Page with violating the Rose law by selling intoxicating liquors. The dates the alleged sales were made are given in the affidavits.

Tuesday afternoon, Marshal Lauer came up from Prospect and served warrants on Burke and Neidig. The accused men boarded a car and went to Prospect, where they appeared before Mayor Huff and pleaded not guilty to the charges against them. Burke's hearing was set for July 29, at 9 o'clock, and Neidig's hearing for the day following at the same hour. They were placed under a bond of $200 each, which they furnished.

Wednesday the Prospect marshal served warrants on Forsythe, Page and Klehm. Klehm is employed at the hotel of Herman Kalkbrenner, on west Center street. The men took the ten-o'clock car for Prospect and appeared before the mayor. Each of the accused entered a plea of not guilty and the bond for their appearance was fixed at $200 each, which was furnished. Klehm's hearing was set for July 30, at 1 o'clock, Page's hearing for August 2, at 4 o'clock, and Forsythe's hearing for August 3, at 1 o'clock.

Miller, who resides in the country about five miles north of Marion, was notified over the telephone of the charge against him. He was unable to leave his work, and informed the marshal he would appear at Prospect Thursday morning.

Unusual Bush—A currant bush, bearing its fruit, growing in the fork of a Norwegian pine tree in the yard at the home of Eugene Fairfield, on Delaware avenue, attracts the attention of passersby. Apparently the small fruit-bearing bush is thriving in the bark of the tree, as no earth appears to be lodged in the fork.

Sellers gave an interesting talk in regard to the primary work in the Sunday-school room, her subject being "Primary Echoes."

Rev. F. E. Zechiel presented golden pennants to the following townships: Grand, Salt Rock, Grand Prairie, Tully, Marion, Big Island, Montgomery, Green Camp, Pleasant, Waldo and Prospect.

RUSH OF TAXPAYERS IS ENDED TUESDAY

A Big Collection of Taxes and $50,000 Still Out.

The rush of taxpayers at the office of County Treasurer W. C. Wottring ended at 9 o'clock Tuesday night, when $190,354.55 of the last half of the 1908 tax collection had been paid. The receipts on the last day amounted to about $16,000, while for the day previous the receipts reached $19,000, the largest amount ever paid in any one single day in the county's history.

In the banks at Caledonia, Prospect, LaRue, Green Camp and Waldo, where taxpayers are also permitted to settle with the county, County Treasurer Wottring reports a collection of $36,000, making a total tax collection for the county of more than $220,000.

"About $50,000 remains unpaid," Deputy County Treasurer L. G. Jones, stated Wednesday. "But $25,000 of that amount will probably be delinquent."

DR. SHRATT SOARS WITHOUT MOTOR

Claims To Have Good Thing in Flying Machine.

West Brandywine, Pa., July 21.—Dr. George A. Shratt, physician, farmer and inventor, says he has conquered the air in a flying machine that will operate without either a gas bag or a motor. Shratt has been working for years on a model and says he has made a successful flight.

"In my trial flight," Shratt says, "I attained something no air navigator has ever been able to do—that is, to navigate a plane in the air with absolute stability without the aid of a motor.

"I covered about 300 feet at a height of 600 feet from the ground, but that is as high as I desired to ascend at the time. Even at that height I found that I had in the machine the valuable gliding stability for which we have been working for a decade."

MRS. D. B. RIDER IS GETTING BETTER

Suffers Hemorrhage Lasting Nearly Twenty-Four Hours.

The condition of Mrs. D. B. Rider, of Richland township, who was thought to be dying of nose-bleed, Tuesday, is very much improved. The hemorrhage lasted almost twenty-four hours. Wednesday, Mrs. Rider was very weak from the loss of blood, but the attending physician says she will recover, unless there should be a sudden recurrence of the hemorrhage.

Mrs. Rider was attacked by nose-bleed, Monday afternoon, shortly after 5 o'clock, and the flow was not stopped until 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Tuesday night, it was reported that Mrs. Rider had suffered a second stroke of paralysis as a result of the long-continued attack of nose-bleed and would die, but the fact that she bled so freely, the attending physician states, probably prevented anything of that nature occuring.

WOMAN CONFESSES DOING SHOPLIFTING

Mrs. Charles Saiter Finds Herself in Serious Trouble.

SHE IS ARRESTED ON FIRST OFFENSE

Steals Goods at Five Stores in the City—Says She Is Induced To Steal by a Woman from Columbus—Decision Reserved by Mayor—Some Police Court Items.

Shortly after 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Captain Bond was called to the D. B. Goodsell store to arrest a shoplifter, who on being taken to police station confessed to having taken things at five stores in the city during the afternoon. The woman gave her name as Mrs. Charles Saiter, of Watertoo street, stating that she moved here, about a month or six weeks ago, with her husband from Worthington. Previous to living in Worthington she resided in Columbus.

About 3 o'clock, the woman entered the Goodsell store and looked at some silk remnants. She was caught in the act of wrapping one of the remnants up and hiding it and was detained by Goodsell until the officer arrived. The remnant taken at the store was a plaid silk four yards in length and worth a dollar a yard. After being taken to police station her packages were looked through and found to contain articles from four other stores. She confessed to having visited the store of J. P. Ludwig where she stole a corset. Other articles of smaller value were taken at the Frank Brothers & Company store and the New York store while at Warner & Edwards she pilfered shirtwaists of the value of $5.75.

In her confession of the crimes, she stated that she was accompanied by a woman from Columbus who left on the two-o'clock car for her home and that she was in possession of some things. She said that it was through this woman that she got into the trouble and that this was her first offense. After the confession and being confronted by the proprietors of the five stores, who all contemplated filing charges against her, she fainted. Affidavits against the woman were filed by D. B. Goodsell, D. F. Edwards and J. P. Ludwig. After considerable trouble in reviving her, the woman pleaded guilty to the charges against her. Sentence was reserved until Friday and she was released on her own recognizance.

The husband of the woman is an employe in the Marion Steam Shovel shops, and, on hearing of his wife's trouble, went direct to police station. He stated that it was the first trouble his wife had been in and she had acted without his knowledge. As her story is credited, it is believed the matter will be adjusted with the proprietors of the various places to avoid her being prosecuted. The woman is about twenty years of age.

There will be some great running races at Richwood Fair, Aug. 3, 4, 5 and 6. 201-Wed-2-10wk-2

MURDERED BANKER REARED IN COUNTY

John B. Sayler Is Remembered by Many Here.

LIVES MANY YEARS IN RICHLAND TOWNSHIP

Resides at Kirkpatrick for a Time Before Moving to Watseka, Illinois—Wife and Her Father Held with Dr. William Miller for Murder—Relatives in City.

John B. Sayler, the murdered banker of Crescent City, Illinois, was born and raised in Marion county. He grew to manhood in this county. He was the son of Barney Sayler, who, twenty years ago, moved with his family to Watseka, Illinois, where he died several years ago.

John B. Sayler is well remembered by many residents of Richland township, where he was born, and by citizens of Kirkpatrick, where he lived a few years before going to Illinois with his father.

At the time Sayler was shot by Dr. William Miller, now under arrest at Watseka on the charge of murder, with the dead man's wife and the latter's father and brother held as accomplices, local relatives received a telegram saying that the former Marion county man was dead, but they did not know he had been killed until they read of the sensational affair in news despatches. Even then, they were in doubt as to whether the man slain was their relative, as the murdered man's name was given as John Sayler, and when he lived in this county he was known as Byron Sayler. Only the members of his immediate family knew that his first name was John.

Two years ago, when Mrs. W. E. Owen, residing three miles east of the city, went to California, to spend the winter, Mrs. Clara Sayler, of Watseka, Illinois, mother of the dead banker, kept house for the Owen family. She is a first cousin of Mrs. Owen.

Mrs. Sayler, widow of the slain man, whose alleged relations with Dr. Miller led to the tragedy, had never visited here, and is not known to her husband's local relatives.

Wednesday's session of the special grand jury summoned at Watseka, to investigate the killing of Sayler, the Crescent City banker, State's Attorney Pallissard continued his effort to shatter the self-defense plea set up by Dr. Miller.

The testimony adduced Tuesday, which tended to disprove the statement that Dr. Miller, Mrs. Sayler and John Grunden manufactured the self-defense story after Sayler had been slain, and placed a blood-covered ax by his body after the killing. Witnesses told the grand jury that when they reached the Sayler home, a few minutes after the tragedy, there was no ax in sight, though Miller pointed it out to the coroner after he reached the scene.

What many believe is the most damaging evidence yet produced by the state is the packet of letters found last week in Sayler's private vault. These have been introduced. Though the prosecutor is reticent, it is reported that the chief evidence in this packet is a letter from Dr. Miller to Mrs. Sayler which Sayler intercepted.

You can not help from having a good time at the Richwood Fair, Aug. 3, 4, 5 and 6, something all the time. 201-Wed-2-10wk-2

STORM SWEEPS TEN INTO GULF

Tarpon Fishing Pier Bears Brunt of Hurricane.

GALVESTON IN GRAVE DANGER

New Government Wall, However, Stands Storm.

Proves To Be Strong Against Wind and Wave and City Escapes Without Loss of Life and with Comparatively Small Property Loss. People Follow Weather Forecast and Leave Points of Danger.

Galveston, Tex., July 22.—So far as is known, ten dead is the total number of lives lost in the hurricane which swept over the Gulf of Mexico and struck Galveston. While the city of Galveston was held safe against the fury of the storm by the government's $2,000,000 sea wall, far out in the gulf, on Tarpon island, seven miles from the city, where the storm whipped over the jetty into the bay, 10 persons were washed from the rocky promontories into the gulf.

Those drowned were members of a fishing party and employes of the Tarpon pier, marooned in a jetty. Boats were sent to their assistance, and it was learned that the house in which they had sought refuge had been washed away. While it is impossible to get an accurate list of the dead owing to the fact that the register has always been kept at the pier, the best information obtainable is as follows: Captain Bettison and wife; Edward Lewis; C. H. Dailey, circulation manager Galveston Tribune, formerly of Chicago, and four negroes. The others are unknown.

Sweeping westward, the tropical storm which had been central over the gulf struck Galveston. The wind attained a velocity of 68 miles an hour, and shifted to the northeast, heaving the waters of Galveston bay up against the island and flooding that section which had not been raised. The water backed up into the main streets of the city, and for a time heavy loss was feared. The principal damage, however, was confined to the beach front, where bath houses and pleasure piers were swept away, but shipping was undisturbed.

Predicted by Weather Bureau.

A hurricane for east Texas was forecasted at the district weather bureau in New Orleans, and warnings sent out. When the wind and rain in all their intensity arrived several hours later, they found Galveston prepared. The inhabitants of the few scattered houses in the low section of the island had already sought safety, and the vessels, which had cleared and prepared to sail, were riding at anchor in the bay.

The fury of the storm was soon abated, and the anxiety of those who entertained fears of another tidal wave was thus early relieved. So short was the duration of the storm here that the Mallory line steamer which was booked to sail for New York left on schedule time.

A heavy dredge, torn from her moorings, had been blown against the single bridge which connects Galveston with the mainland, however, and the telegraph cables had been parted. As a result all manner of rumors were soon rife throughout the country to the effect that Galveston had again suffered such a storm as that which practically destroyed the city nine years ago. As soon as communication could be re-established these rumors were denied and the true story was told.

Fear For Bishop's Safety.

New Orleans, July 22.—A special from Galveston says: As a result of the gulf storm, fears are entertained for the safety of the Right Rev. Henry D. Aves, a missionary bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church, who with a large fishing party was last heard from at Red Fish shoals, San Jacinto bay.

Nine Bodies Recovered.

Galveston, Texas, July 22.—Nine bodies of the eleven people drowned in yesterday's storm had been recovered at noon today. These people lost their lives when giant waves swept them from the tarpon fishing pier six miles out in the gulf. Search for the other bodies is being continued.

Rapid progress has been made with the repair work on the railroad bridge and it was announced at noon that trains would be run into Galveston at 6 o'clock.

Yacht Is Wrecked.

Houston, Tex., July 22.—A report from Galveston just received says a pleasure yacht cruising near the Galveston coast was wrecked yesterday and all on board were drowned. Ten persons from Houston were aboard the yacht. Efforts are being made to confirm the report.

PROGRESSIVES STATE POLICY

Want Revision That Will Help the People.

SAY PRESIDENT IS MISQUOTED

Senator Cummins, After Conference With Taft at White House, Issues Statement, In Which He Says Free Raw Materials Will Not Benefit Consumer Unless Rates on Manufactured Articles Are Also Slashed Explains Several Schedules

Washington July 23—The progressive Republican senators have made public a statement through Senator Cummins of Iowa which is accepted as representing their views relative to the controversy over the pending tariff measure

Mr Cummins had previously been in consultation for two hours with the president and an exchange of views had passed between Mr Cummins and others of the ten who voted against the tariff bill in the senate

The pronouncement is evidently intended to meet the idea that the president and the downward revisionists would be content with free raw material I indorse every word of the statement recently made by the president and earnestly hope that he will be successful in bringing the conferees to his views says Mr Cummins who then called attention to the fact that especial emphasis has been placed upon the so called raw materials

I feel compelled' said Mr Cummins to remind the public that neither the president's statement nor our fight was so confined He then proceeded

Near Protective Point.

"While it is of the utmost importance that iron ore oil hides and coal be dealt with as proposed by the president it is of still greater importance that the duties on manufactured products shall be brought down somewhere near the protective point It will be of little advantage to the body of the people to do away with unnecessary duties upon raw materials if the manufacturers are permitted to enjoy the excessive duties that have brought to take extortionate profits upon the things that the people must buy and use'

Mr Cummins says that those who have been contending for lower duties can afford to surrender a part of their just demands if they can in the main obtain the reductions which insure the people against undue prices on the chief commodities of commerce

In the bill as it left the senate he says the reductions in the steel schedule generally are not sufficient but the schedule might be accepted but for the increase on structural iron and steel

Structural iron and steel, the use of which is so rapidly increasing says Mr Cummins is raised from the Dingley rate of $10 per ton and the house rate of $6 per ton to 45 per cent ad valorem which at the present price of this commodity means a duty of $16 per ton an increase over the present law of $6 per ton and over the house provision of $10 per ton

Schedule on Steel Rails

"When it is considered that the duty on steel rails is $3 50 per ton and their market price is $28 per ton the proposed duty upon a form of steel which sells for $35 per ton is wholly indefensible Free iron ore is a very desirable thing but when the welfare of the consumer is taken into account it would be vastly better if a fair rate can be secured on but one of these items to allow the duty on iron ore to go at 25 cents per ton and cut the duty on structural steel to $5 or $6 per ton where it properly belongs and where it would still furnish complete protection for home producers measured by the Republican standard

In the paper schedule the house rate of $2 per ton on print paper without the possibility of increasing it by a countervailing duty and free wood pulp also protected against a countervailing duty should be rigidly insisted upon

'In the cotton schedule the senate increases from beginning to end should be rejected and while I believe that there should be reductions in this schedule the people might be willing to stand for the house rate barring of course the hosiery increases

'The woolen schedule with respect to the compensatory duties to manufacturers is manifestly wrong and the artificial and arbitrary plan of estimating the relation between unwashed and scoured wool is grossly absurd"

ORDER TO COME OUT OF CHAOS

President Reaches Understanding With Conferees.

HOUSE INSURGENTS PROTEST

Send Committee to Chairman Payne Asking Him to Help In Fight Against Free Raw Materials and Are Met With Flat Refusal—Aldrich Feels Pulse of Senate and Finds Sentiment Strongly Opposed to Free Iron, Coal or Hides

Washington July 23—Surface indications now point to an early settlement of the controversy between the senate and house members of the tariff conference committee the general belief being that President Taft has reached an understanding with the Republican leaders in each branch of congress

A long and important consultation was held at the White House, participated in by the president Senator Aldrich and Representative Payne, at which the chief executive was assured that a harmonious settlement of the differences existing between the two branches of congress is practicable

The senators opposed to the free raw material program were consulted by Senator Aldrich, and a committee representing the same position on the house side held a conference with Chairman Payne In addition the house conferees met to have the experts of the senate finance committee explain the senate changes in the cotton schedule

It is evident that the president, by informing the conferees that the disputed points were before them for settlement brought about a condition that augurs well for an early agreement of a conference report The chief executive was able to get a better insight into the obstacles to the free raw material plan by his conference with the two leaders than was possible in so large a gathering as that which was present at the dinner

Aldrich Sounds Senators

Senator Aldrich met a number of senators who are opposed to free hides coal and iron and no encouragement was offered for the placing of any of these articles on the free list In fact were it possible to get those senators to yield the situation in the house would have to be dealt with

The tariff insurgents in the house who are opposed to free raw material met again and adopted resolutions protesting against the plan They designated Representatives Gaines (W Va) Mondell (Wyo) and Kennedy (O) as a committee to confer with Representative Payne The latter did not offer the insurgents" much encouragement He explained that he was chairman of the committee which reported the tariff bill and that he was appointed as a conferee to have the house provisions adopted in preference to the senate provisions

Representative Dwight (N Y) the Republican whip of the house conferred with Senator Aldrich and informed him that the anti free raw material sentiment in the house was a matter which required serious consideration He said that its strength had grown to 15 members

The advocates of dutiable hides in both houses declare that a compromise is possible but that they can not consider the placing of these articles on the free list One of the conferees declared that the plan to reduce the rates on leather goods to compensate for free hides was not feasible without long delay, and that the president undoubtedly would accept the judgment of the conferees on this point

The conferees spent the entire day in discussing the cotton schedule

Witnesses Again Disagree In Sutton Hearing.

Annapolis Md July 23—Glaring discrepancies in testimony before the court of inquiry which is investigating the circumstances surrounding the death of Lieutenant James Sutton at the naval academy two years ago was shown at the hearing in regard to the location of the bullet wound which caused the young Oregonian's death

It would appear that it would have been a difficult matter for Sutton to have shot himself lying prone on the ground with three men on top of him if the bullet entered the top of his skull as Surgeon George Pickrell who examined Sutton's body testified it did Colonel Charles A Doyen, commandant of marines at that time testified that he examined Sutton's body immediately after the shooting felt the wound in his head and that it was located on the right side, a little behind and on a line with the top of the ear

HOW WIRE IS DRAWN IN MODERN WORKS

Securing Length and the Proper Firmness.

THE METHODS USED TO MAKE GOOD WIRE

Some Interesting Facts as to the Manufacture of Wire for All Grades of Work—What the Material Costs and What It Is Worth When Finished.

Bars of metal four inches square are heated and passed while hot and plastic through rapidly revolving rolls reducing them to wire rods which vary from one quarter of an inch to an inch or more in diameter, depending upon the finished size of wire wanted

These rods which are formed into coils as they pass through the rolls are dipped in acid baths to remove loose scale and provide a lubricant for drawing Drawing consists of pulling rods while cold through holes of gradually decreasing diameter drilled in steel plates During this process the particles of metal become elongated and strained, making the wire harder and more brittle To restore it to a proper temper it is necessary to heat or anneal it

When a fine diameter is required there must be repeated annealings and drawings This may be done until the bar which originally was four inches square and four feet long, becomes reduced to a diameter of a single thousandth of an inch and extended 1,000 miles in length Before so fine a size is reached the wire will cut into the steel of the die plate so the usual die plates must be discarded and the drawing continued through holes drilled in diamonds the diameter of these diamond dies decreasing by fractional parts of a thousandth of an inch This wire affords a striking illustration of a material made more valuable by the application of labor

From the time the bar of metal enters the furnace nothing is added to it All the work is done with one article, which is passed through rolls and drawn through die plates until it is finished The wire is made from an extra high grade of steel worth in the bar six cents a pound, which is much above the price of the greater bulk of steel In the finished wire the value is increased from six cents to $50 a pound

Wire for fencing and the common grades of so called market wire do not involve a high labor cost and sell at a small advance above the price of the metal bar Other wires drawn for more exacting purposes sell at higher prices Wire one one-thousandth of an inch in diameter is of course exceptional, being prepared for delicate electrical tests of such importance that it is deemed advisable to go to great expense to make it exactly the required size—Chicago Tribune

EXPLOSION OF MOTOR CYCLE

Four Spectators Killed at German Speed Tests.

Berlin July 19—Four persons were killed more than 20 severely injured and a dozen others slightly injured as the result of the explosion of a motor cycle and a fire which followed it during a cycle race at the old Botanic gardens

After a few laps the tire on one of the pacemakers' motor cycle burst and the rider lost control The benzine exploded in a burst of flame and the machine leaped into the air and hurled itself against the barrier, which broke down

The rider was thrown off and fell against other competitors who were pitched to the track, several of them being severely injured So terrific was the speed of the motor cycle that it continued on its course after the explosion, crashing into the public stand hurling spectators right and left and setting on fire several women's dresses Two women were instantly killed and their bodies saturated with flaming benzine, were burned to cinders

A panic ensued in which a great number of persons including children were badly trampled Eighteen men and four women were seriously injured, two of the men having since died

Following a Battle in Which Four Feudists Are Killed.

Natchez Miss, July 21—Survivors of the last battle between the Pritchard and Newman feudists will sign a peace agreement by which they will promise not to renew hostilities when they leave a local hospital and return to Meadville

In the recent clash four were killed Sam Newman and Ernest Newman, who are still confined to their beds and a Pritchard leader of the Pritchard crowd have come to terms

As soon as the agreement is signed a date for a Franklin county election to choose successors to the officials killed in the recent fight will be set Fear of a renewal of hostilities has prevented the election.

STORM SWEEPS TEN INTO GULF

Tarpon Fishing Pier Bears Brunt of Hurricane

GALVESTON IN GRAVE DANGER

New Government Wall, However, Stands Storm

Proves To Be Strong Against Wind and Wave and City Escapes Without Loss of Life and with Comparatively Small Property Loss People Follow Weather Forecast and Leave Points of Danger

Galveston Tex July 22—So far as is known ten dead is the total number of lives lost in the hurricane which swept over the Gulf of Mexico and struck Galveston While the city of Galveston was held safe against the fury of the storm by the government s $2,000 000 sea wall far out in the gulf on Tarpon island seven miles from the city where the storm whipped over the jetty into the bay 10 persons were washed from the rocky promontories into the gulf

Those drowned were members of a fishing party and employes of the Tarpon pier marooned in a jetty Boats were sent to their assistance and it was learned that the house in which they had sought refuge had been washed away While it is impossible to get an accurate list of the dead owing to the fact that the register has always been kept at the pier, the best information obtainable is as follows Captain Bettison and wife, Edward Lewis C H Dailey circulation manager Galveston Tribune formerly of Chicago and four negroes The others are unknown

Sweeping westward the tropical storm which had been central over the gulf struck Galveston The wind attained a velocity of 68 miles an hour and shifted to the northeast heaving the waters of Galveston bay up against the island and flooding that section which had not been raised The water backed up into the main streets of the city and for a time heavy loss was feared The principal damage however was confined to the beach front where bath houses and pleasure piers were swept away but shipping was undisturbed

A hurricane for east Texas was forecasted at the district weather bureau in New Orleans and warnings sent out When the wind and rain in all their intensity arrived several hours later they found Galveston prepared The inhabitants of the few scattered houses in the low section of the island had already sought safety and the vessels which had cleared and prepared to sail were riding at anchor in the bay

The fury of the storm was soon abated and the anxiety of those who entertained fears of another tidal wave was thus early relieved So short was the duration of the storm here that the Mallory line steamer which was booked to sail for New York left on schedule time

A heavy dredge torn from her moorings had been blown against the single bridge which connects Galveston with the mainland however and the telegraph cables had been parted As a result all manner of rumors were soon rife throughout the country to the effect that Galveston had again suffered such a storm as that which practically destroyed the city nine years ago As soon as communication could be reestablished these rumors were denied and the true story was told

Fear For Bishop s Safety

New Orleans July 22 A special from Galveston says As a result of the gulf storm fears are entertained for the safety of the Right Rev Henry D Aves a missionary bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church who with a large fishing party was last heard from at Red Fish shoals San Jacinto bay

Nine Bodies Recovered

Galveston Texas July 22 Nine bodies of the eleven people drowned in yesterdays storm had been recovered at noon today These people lost their lives when giant waves swept them from the tarpon fishing pier six miles out in the gulf Search for the other bodies is being continued

Rapid progress has been made with the repair work on the railroad bridge and it was announced at noon that trains would be run into Galveston at one o clock

PROGRESSIVES STATE POLICY

Want Revision That Will Help the People.

SAY PRESIDENT IS MISQUOTED

Senator Cummins, After Conference With Taft at White House, Issues Statement, In Which He Says Free Raw Materials Will Not Benefit Consumer Unless Rates on Manufactured Articles Are Also Slashed Explains Several Schedules

Washington, July 23—The progressive' Republican senators have made public a statement through Senator Cummins of Iowa which is accepted as representing their views relative to the controversy over the pending tariff measure

Mr Cummins had previously been in consultation for two hours with the president and an exchange of views had passed between Mr Cummins and others of the ten who voted against the tariff bill in the senate

The pronouncement is evidently intended to meet the idea that the president and the downward revisionists would be content with free raw material 'I indorse every word of the statement recently made by the president and earnestly hope that he will be successful in bringing the conferees to his views says Mr Cummins who then called attention to the fact that especial emphasis has been placed upon the so called raw materials

I feel compelled said Mr Cummins to remind the public that neither the president's statement nor our fight was so confined He then proceeded

Near Protective Point.

"While it is of the utmost importance that iron ore oil hides and coal be dealt with as proposed by the president it is of still greater importance that the duties on manufactured products shall be brought down somewhere near the protective point It will be of little advantage to the body of the people to do away with unnecessary duties upon raw materials if the manufacturers are permitted to enjoy the excessive duties that have brought to take extortionate profits upon the things that the people must buy and use'

Mr Cummins says that "those who have been contending for lower duties can afford to surrender a part of their just demands if they can in the main obtain the reductions which insure the people against undue prices on the chief commodities of commerce

In the bill as it left the senate he says the reductions in the steel schedule generally are not sufficient, but the schedule might be accepted but for the increase on structural iron and steel

Structural iron and steel the use of which is so rapidly increasing says Mr Cummins is raised from the Dingley rate of $10 per ton and the house rate of $6 per ton to 45 per cent ad valorem which at the present price of this commodity means a duty of $16 per ton an increase over the present law of $6 per ton and over the house provision of $10 per ton

Schedule on Steel Rails

'When it is considered that the duty on steel rails is $3 50 per ton and their market price is $28 per ton the proposed duty upon a form of steel which sells for $35 per ton is wholly indefensible Free iron ore is a very desirable thing but when the welfare of the consumer is taken into account it would be vastly better if a fair rate can be secured on but one of these items to allow the duty on iron ore to go at 25 cents per ton and cut the duty on structural steel to $5 or $6 per ton where it properly belongs and where it would still furnish complete protection for home producers measured by the Republican standard

In the paper schedule the house rate of $2 per ton on print paper without the possibility of increasing it by a countervailing duty, and free wood pulp also protected against a countervailing duty should be rigidly insisted upon

'In the cotton schedule the senate increases from beginning to end should be rejected and while I believe that there should be reductions in this schedule the people might be willing to stand for the house rate barring of course the hosiery increases

The woolen schedule with respect to the compensatory duties to manufacturers is manifestly wrong and the artificial and arbitrary plan of estimating the relation between unwashed and scoured wool is grossly absurd

ORDER TO COME OUT OF CHAOS

President Reaches Understanding With Conferees.

HOUSE INSURGENTS PROTEST

Send Committee to Chairman Payne Asking Him to Help In Fight Against Free Raw Materials and Are Met With Flat Refusal—Aldrich Feels Pulse of Senate and Finds Sentiment Strongly Opposed to Free Iron, Coal or Hides

Washington July 23—Surface indications now point to an early settlement of the controversy between the senate and house members of the tariff conference committee the general belief being that President Taft has reached an understanding with the Republican leaders in each branch of congress

A long and important consultation was held at the White House participated in by the president Senator Aldrich and Representative Payne, at which the chief executive was assured that a harmonious settlement of the differences existing between the two branches of congress is practicable

The senators opposed to the free raw material program were consulted by Senator Aldrich, and a committee representing the same position on the house side held a conference with Chairman Payne In addition the house conferees met to have the experts of the senate finance committee explain the senate changes in the cotton schedule

It is evident that the president, by informing the conferees that the disputed points were before them for settlement brought about a condition that augurs well for an early agreement of a conference report The chief executive was able to get a better insight into the obstacles to the free raw material plan by his conference with the two leaders than was possible in so large a gathering as that which was present at the dinner

Aldrich Sounds Senators

Senator Aldrich met a number of senators who are opposed to free hides coal and iron and no encouragement was offered for the placing of any of these articles on the free list In fact were it possible to get those senator to yield the situation in the house would have to be dealt with

The tariff insurgents in the house who are opposed to free raw material met again and adopted resolutions protesting against the plan They designated Representatives Gaines (W Va) Mondell (Wyo) and Kennedy (O) as a committee to confer with Representative Payne The latter did not offer the insurgents' much encouragement He explained that he was chairman of the committee which reported the tariff bill and that he was appointed as a conferee to have the house provisions adopted in preference to the senate provisions

Representative Dwight (N Y) the Republican whip of the house conferred with Senator Aldrich and informed him that the anti free raw material sentiment in the house was a matter which required serious consideration He said that its strength had grown to 17 members

The advocates of dutiable hides in both houses declare that a compromise is possible but that they cannot consider the placing of these articles on the free list One of the conferees declared that the plan to reduce the rates on leather goods to compensate for free hides was not feasible without long delay and that the president undoubtedly would accept the judgment of the conferees on this point

WOUND'S LOCATION MATTER OF DOUBT

Witnesses Again Disagree In Sutton Hearing.

Annapolis Md July 23—Glaring discrepancies in testimony before the court of inquiry which is investigating the circumstances surrounding the death of Lieutenant James Sutton at the naval academy two years ago was shown at the hearing in regard to the location of the bullet wound which caused the young Oregonian's death

It would appear that it would have been a difficult matter for Sutton to have shot himself lying prone on the ground with three men on top of him if the bullet entered the top of his skull as Surgeon George Pickrell who examined Sutton's body testified it did Colonel Charles A Doven, commandant of marines at that time testified that he examined Sutton's body immediately after the shooting felt the wound in his head and that it was located on the right side a little behind and on a line with the top of the ear

HOW WIRE IS DRAWN IN MODERN WORKS

Securing Length and the Proper Firmness

THE METHODS USED TO MAKE GOOD WIRE

Some Interesting Facts as to the Manufacture of Wire for All Grades of Work—What the Material Costs and What It Is Worth When Finished.

Bars of metal four inches square are heated and passed while hot and plastic through rapidly revolving rolls reducing them to wire rods which vary from one-quarter of an inch to an inch or more in diameter, depending upon the finished size of wire wanted

These rods, which are formed into coils as they pass through the rolls are dipped in acid baths to remove loose scale and provide a lubricant for drawing Drawing consists of pulling rods while cold through holes of gradually decreasing diameter drilled in steel plates During this process the particles of metal become elongated and strained, making the wire harder and more brittle To restore it to a proper temper it is necessary to heat or anneal it

When a fine diameter is required there must be repeated annealings and drawings This may be done until the bar which originally was four inches square and four feet long, becomes reduced to a diameter of a single thousandth of an inch and extended 13 000 miles in length Before so fine a size is reached the wire will cut into the steel of the die plate so the usual die plates must be discarded and the drawing continued through holes drilled in diamonds, the diameter of these diamond dies decreasing by fractional parts of a thousandth of an inch This wire affords a striking illustration of a material made more valuable by the application of labor

From the time the bar of metal enters the furnace nothing is added to it All the work is done with one article, which is passed through rolls and drawn through die plates until it is finished The wire is made from an extra high grade of steel worth in the bar six cents a pound, which is much above the price of the greater bulk of steel In the finished wire the value is increased from six cents to $50 a pound

Wire for fencing and the common grades of so-called market wire do not involve a high labor cost and sell at a small advance above the price of the metal bar Other wires drawn for more exacting purposes sell at higher prices Wire one one-thousandth of an inch in diameter is of course exceptional, being prepared for delicate electrical tests of such importance that it is deemed advisable to go to great expense to make it exactly the required size — Chicago Tribune

In a lengthy decision handed down, Thursday morning, by the Franklin county circuit court, the former ruling of the court preventing the Hocking Valley Railroad company from controlling the Toledo and Ohio Central, the Kanawha & Michigan, and certain Hocking Valley coall mines, was affirmed in every particular.

Under the former order of the court, the lines were separated and placed under a readjusted management, so the decision will cause no future changes.

The case was given a rehearing at Dayton, June 3 and 4. Attorneys for the Hocking Valley secured it under the "commodities clause" of the Hepburn act, which the court ruled irrelative, and on the contention that the K & M. was not a competing company, which the court rejected.

J. F Morganthaler, administrator of the estate of Mary Morganthaler, has filed a petition to sell real estate in the probate court. The hearing has been set for August 16.

MYSTERIOUS VISITOR IS VILLROY BARNETT

Man Is Missing for the Past Sixteen Years.

SISTER LIVING HERE ANXIOUS TO SEE HIM

He Leaves Marion More Than Thirty Years Ago To Search for Gold. Does Not Know His Sister Is in This City and Does Not Know Her Name—Mother's Prayers.

The mysterious stranger, who called at the home of Frank C. Detwiler, No 663 south Prospect street, Monday, and said he had come 1,000 miles to get a last drink from the old well and to see the house where he was born, was Villroy Barnett, a son of the late George Barnett, who was the first white male child born in Marion.

The middle-aged man, who refused to divulge his identity to Mrs. Detwiler when he called at her home, revealed his name to William Leeper, who lives at No. 531 south Prospect street. Mrs. Leeper knew him when he was a small child He pledged the Leepers to secrecy and not until Barnett's half sister, Mrs. Wesley Cook, of No. 263 north Seffner avenue, implored them to tell did they inform her that the mysterious visitor was her long-lost half-brother.

Mrs. Cook was at the Leeper home when a reporter for the Star called there, Thursday. She said:

"My husband was reading the Star to me late last night about the mysterious caller at the Detwiler home. We knew that the house had been built by Mr. Barnett and that was why we were interested. I never dreamed that the man could be Villroy until it came to that part where it said he had fallen down the stairs many times and all at once it came to me that it was Villroy. You don't know how awful it makes one feel to be surprised that way I couldn't sleep last night. I just wanted to get up and go out and find him.

"How long ago has it been since he went away? Let's see. I was four years old and he was seventeen. It's been over thirty years. He went to hunt gold in the West. We hadn't heard anything from him for sixteen years. We supposed he was dead. Mo her died five years ago while visiting at Upper Sandusky She always talked of Villroy and wanted to see him. Every time there was a railroad wreck or a mine horror she always scanned the names of the dead and injured to see whether or not his name was among them. Her prayers were always with him. He does not know how to find me; he does not know my name now, and I do hope he will come back."

F. M. Paschall, of this city, is a half brother of the man now being sought by his local relatives, and John Barnett, a brother, lives at Richwood. George Barnett, Jr., is somewhere in the West.

Villroy Barnett, who it is learned was at Waldo before coming to Marion, is believed to have been in the Klondike. He was last heard of sixteen years ago at Denver, Colorado.

SHERIFF J. G. STARK SUBMITS HIS REPORT

Number of Prisoners Confined in County Jail.

MOST OF PRISONERS ARE NATIVE OHIOANS

Of 128 Prisoners Confined During the Past Year, but Seven Are Women—All of the Prisoners Are Able To Read and Write—Ten are Insane—Penalties Imposed.

A report compiled by Sheriff John G. Stark and forwarded to the state board of charities and corrections shows that for the year ending June 30, 1909, 128 prisoners were confined in the jail Of this number only seven were women.

The report further shows that 116 of the prisoners confined during the year were native Ohioans, while four were born in other states and eight were foreigners. Forty-six were held on charges of felonies and eighty-one for misdemeanors. One was held for violating a city ordinance.

Sheriff Stark states that all of the 128 prisoners were able to read and write. Ten of them were insane. All were over sixteen years of age.

The fact that but five of all the prisoners confined in the jail during the year were sent to the penitentiary is regarded as a remarkable showing for Marion county. Three of the total number received sentences in the state reformatory and six in the workhouse at Columbus.

The average length of jail sentence was thirty days.

The total amount of money received from the county by the sheriff for maintenance of the prisoners was $1,641. Of this amount $1,079.65 went to former Sheriff E E. Drown and $561.10 to Sheriff Stark.

SUFFRAGETTES GREET ASQUITH

Disrupt a Gathering at Which Premier Speaks.

CHARGE HIM WITH THEIR PETITIONS

Assail Him with Megaphones from Housetops

Balloon Is Utilized to Fly Over the Crowd and Drop Handbills Reading "Votes for Women"—Two Suffragettes Released from Jail To Save Their Lives—Others Are Also Refusing to Eat Anything

London July 20 —England s militant suffragettes are no respecters of time or place They want to vote and they dont care who knows it On the other hand they are desirous of having everybody know it, and especially do they desire to bring their plees to the notice of Premier Asquith, whom they follow like a collector would a bankrupt who had just fallen heir to a million

Premier Asquith today took part in the unveiling of a statue on the Thames embankment gardens and now he is heartily sorry that he did

For the lady suffragettes seized upon this public occasion to let the premier know their wishes in this little matter of voting The methods they took were a little loud true and somewhat unique, but they now believe the premier is fully aware of their desire to vote

When Asquith arose to speak a few hundred of the suffragettes posted themselves on the tops of all the adjoining houses, armed with megaphones Every time the premier reached for one of those wonderful oratorical climaxes for which he is noted the lady suffragettes screamed 'We want votes for women" so loudly and in such discord that the effect of the well-rounded sentences of the premier were totally lost

Charge the Premier.

But this was not all Like the six hundred at Balaklava, they charged the premier Gathering their skirts about them, those suffragettes who were not engaged in the housetop concert, dashed through the crowd at the base of the monument, each bearing aloft a petition which each tried at one and at the same time to press into the hand of the premier

Simultaneously a monster balloon in the basket of which were a number of suffragettes each armed with thousands of circulars bearing the words "Votes for women," was unleashed from a neighboring park and floated directly over the monument while the suffragettes poured out their wrath and their hand bills on the head of the premier and the assembled guests

The police were summoned and dashed through the crowd in the gardens making a cordon about the premier and preventing the suffragettes from reaching him with their petitions

Shy on Balloons

But the police being without a dirigible balloon or a handy aeroplane, couldn t touch the aerial squad of the suffragettes who hurled down thousands of posters, demanding the right to vote and at the same time shouting from the car of the balloon encouragement to their waiting sisters on the ground and their shouting sisters on the roof tops

The premier was rattled so badly that he could hardly conclude his speech and the ceremonies were cut short while Asquith gathering his long coat about him and holding tight to his high hat, fled to shelter from the lady suffragettes

Today s affair, coupled with the announcement that the suffragettes already in jail would starve themselves to death rather than eat in jail has created a nation-wide sensation and the fact that the suffragettes broke up the ceremonies about the unveiling of the monument almost lost them many friends who believe they should have chosen some other occasion to attack the premier

Released from Jail

London, July 20 —The officials of Holloway jail where the suffragettes sentenced following the recent riots are confined are today confronted by a serious situation after the release last evening of Florence Cooke and Gladys Roberts two of the suffragettes to prevent them from starving themselves to death

The fears that deaths will result from the hunger strike which is still persisted in by a dozen of the remaining prisoners Several have eaten nothing for several days and their physical condition has become alarming

The released suffragettes Misses Roberts and Cooke are being hailed by their comrades as martyrs Both are in a dangerous condition Miss Roberts being so weak and hysterical that her release overy is expected to take months

Misses Roberts and Cooke when taken to Holloway jail insisted upon being treated as political prisoners When they were locked up as common offenders they rebelled smashed prison windows broke their cell furniture destroyed the prison clothing given them and assaulted the turnkeys

Fast for Six Days

The jailers thereupon placed the two suffragettes in solitary confinement and the the latter retaliated by refusing to eat the prison food For six days they persisted in refusal Yesterday scarcely able to walk from the jail they were allowed to go lest they die in jail

Owing to the ignorance of the released women as to what took place outside of their own cells and the jailers refusal to give any particulars of the hunger strike few details are obtainable It is learned however that at least a dozen are in a serious condition

Impetus has been added to the "hunger strike by the announcement of Patrick Lawrence rich suffragette sympathizer that he will pay five dollars to the suffragette cause for every hour that each prisoner fasts in jail

DENIES SHE IS AN INCUBATOR

For the Development of Germs of Typhoid.

TYPHOID MARY WANTS FREEDOM

Now Cooks in Pest House in New York.

The Claim Is Made That Wherever Mary Mallon Works Typhoid Fever Appears—She Claims That Specialists Who Examine Her Declare the New York Health Department Is in Error.

New York July 20 — A few more years of this kind of life and I shall go insane I have committed no crime and even if I had I should be given the reasonable doubt that is given a murderer Yet innocent of any crime whatever I am doomed to be a prisoner for life I shall continue my fight for freedom to the end declares Mary Mallon

As Mary Mallon no one in New York remembers her, but as 'Typhoid Mary she is known by reputation to all

The health department declares that while immune from the disease herself she is a walking incubator for typhoid germs and that wherever she goes, an epidemic of typhoid follows Wherefore she was locked up in the pest house on North Brothers island and the courts have recently declared she can not be liberated She has been there for two and a half years Before being sent to the island she was a cook and the health officials declare that she spread the typhoid wherever she worked She declares that she has worked in scores of places where there has been no typhoid and that even now she mingles with the doctors at the pest-house and cooks for them and plays with the children in the various wards The woman declares she has been examined by specialists outside of the health department who declare that she is not "a walking typhoid incubator."

THE UNREST OF THE CATHOLICS

Is Renewed by Action Against Cardinal Andrieu,

WHO REFUSES TO APPEAR IN COURT

And Urges His People To Refuse To Obey Laws.

The Churchmen Are Convinced That a Crisis Is at Hand and the Only Means of Fighting the Civil Authorities Is to Follow the Example Set Them by the Archbishop of Bordeaux

Paris July 20 —The prosecution by the French government of Cardinal Andrieu archbishop of Bordeaux promises the most serious consequences The action taken against Cardinal Andrieu has renewed the unrest of the Catholics which slept for a time and the cardinal is in receip of a huge batch of letters from bishops and other church dignitaries, congratulating him upon his stand

At the time Cardinal Andrieu took charge of affairs at Bordeaux he severely criticised the French anti-church laws and urged the priests and people in his diocese to disobey them when they were antagonistic to the liberties of the church This action was a breach of the civil law of 1906 promulgated by the opponents of the church at the time of the abrogation of the concordat

Because of his utterances Cardinal Andrieu was summoned before the civil courts but he refused to appear for trial and judgment was taken against him by default Several Bayonne churchmen and the archbishop D'Auch were also fined

These and other minor affairs of church and government have stirred religious France as she has not been stirred since the religious controversies of 1906 The churchmen are convinced that a crisis is at hand and the only means of fighting the civil authorities is to follow the example of Cardinal Andrieu

NEIGHBOR SENDS IN A RIOT CALL

Chicago July 19 —Father Michael Z C Pyplatz of a South Side Catholic church is recovering from fright as a result of a mob which held him prisoner in his house yesterday until several wagonloads of police arrive and dispersed the angry parishioners

The trouble it is alleged, was caused by the desire of the parishioners to obtain greater laxity in dancing and card playing, which the priest opposed

After being fifteen years in charge of the church the priest was granted a furlough for a year when, it is said, more license was allowed dancing and card playing

When Father Pyplatz appeared yesterday he was greeted by a crowd with hisses and others One shouted "We dare you to come out and fight"

ELLA GINGLES GETS LIBERTY

She Is Freed of Charge of Stealing Laces.

END OF MYSTERIOUS CASE IN CHICAGO

Friends of the Girl Applaud the Verdict.

The Girl Herself Remains the Coolest of the Lot—Shakes Hands with the Jurymen—Is Given Advice by the Oldest Member—"Now Be a Good Girl and Go Back to Your Home in Ireland"

Chicago July 20—Although the jury cleared Ella Gingles from the charge of stealing lace, they thoroughly discredited the story she told on the witness stand of the attempt to force her into white slavery The verdict was a fitting climax to the series of sensations that have followed the little Irish lacemaker This was the form as read by the clerk "We, the jury find the defendant not guilty and we, the jury, further find that the charges made against Miss Agnes Barrette were unfounded and are untrue"

The basis of the defense made by the Gingles girl who was on trial for stealing lace from Miss Barrette, was that Miss Barrette and others had attacked her and mistreated her in the Wellington hotel on two occasions last winter and that the object of these attacks and the animus back of the theft charge was the attempt to sell her to an unnamed man in French Lick Springs, Ind

The jury reached a verdict after nearly seven hours' deliberation Friends of the girl clapped their hands and screamed when the words "not guilty' were uttered

Miss Gingles who remained the coolest of the lot walked up to the jurors and shook hands with them Juror Thomas Mackey the oldest man on the panel turned to the girl and said Now be a good girl Ella Go back to your home in Ireland and be a good girl'

In many respects the Gingles case was unique in Illinois courts of justice Based on a simple charge of larceny the alleged theft of a quantity of hand made lace, its course went far beyond the counts of the indictment,

AIRSHIP DIVES INTO CHANNEL

In Latham's Endeavor To Cross This Morning.

PICKED UP BY A TORPEDO BOAT

Goes Eight Miles Before Suffering His Mishap.

Latham Is Taken Aboard the Boat and Returned to Calais, Where He Is Hobsonized by a Lot of French Women—Machine Is Towed Back to the Same Port by a Tug Which Goes to Rescue.

Calais France July 19 —Plunging into the English channel, eight miles off the coast of France the monoplane of Hubert Latham came to grief today in an attempt to cross the channel in competition for the London Daily Mails prize of £5 000 Latham whose flight under the circumstances was foolhardy and daring had a narrow escape from death

Stung by the taunts of his friends and the press that his fiasco in former flights were due to lack of nerve Latham made today s flight in the face of the most adverse conditions After falling into the sea, when his motor failed Latham was picked up by the French torpedo boat Harpoon which had been sent out to rescue him His monoplane was towed ashore and Latham says he will repair it and make the flight again

It was believed that owing to the unfavorable condition of the weather, Latham could make no flight today and none of the torpedo or motor boats which were to patrol the course were at their stations At 6 10 this morning the wind abated lightly though it was still too high to attempt the flight

Impatient at the repeated delays Latham suddenly resolved to make the flight and left without sufficiently overhauling his motor neglecting even to notify the motor and torpedo boats to patrol the course of the flight

The torpedo boat Harpoon and the tug Calais heard of the flight after Latham had put to sea and they immediately started in pursuit reaching Latham after he had fallen into the water from a height of 350 feet His monoplane was sustaining him in the water but it is said it was beginning to sink

Followed by Ships.

The news of his start had been sent by wireless and a big fleet of tugs was on the watch Great crowds gathered there to see the finish of the flight When the airship did not appear at 8 50 o clock the spectators grew anxious and the tugs started across the channel to ascertain what had befallen the aeronaut

Meanwhile the Harpoon had started from Calais in the wake of the speeding airship Eight miles from the coast the torpedo boat destroyer found the aeroplane floating on the surface of the water with Latham clinging to the framework The aeronaut was taken aboard the warship and carried back to Calais

Beyond being thoroughly wet Latham was uninjured by the fall of his airship Upon his return to Calais he announced that he was not discouraged by the accident

'I will make another attempt to cross the channel said Latham 'just as soon as I can put the airship in readiness for a flight The way the machine behaved convinces me that I will be able to complete the trip

Machine Rights Itself

The airship was shooting through the air at a height of 250 feet when the accident occurred It glided gently down until within a short distance of the surface and then dove straight for water It was practically uninjured by the fall and righting itself it floated safely with Latham clinging to the edge of the frame

Vast crowds gathered here to welcome Latham as he stepped ashore from the launch of the Harpoon and scores of women surrounded the rescued aeronaut throwing their arms about his neck and kissing him Latham was greatly embarrassed by the reception accorded him and he was finally rescued from the ovulations demonstrations of the women by escort of his friends

The officers of the Harpoon relate that when they sighted the fallen aeroplane Latham was clinging to the upper framework smoking a cigaret as he awaited his rescuers The fall was due to the slowing down of the monoplane motor which failed to furnish power enough to keep the airship afloat

The aeroplane which was not injured by its fall into the sea was slightly damaged while being towed ashore The engine is not injured however and Latham will at once set to work to repair the machine for another flight

Latham's Story

After Latham had donned dry clothing and eaten a hearty breakfast he told his story of the flight

'The failure of the airship to successfully negotiate the entire distance across the channel Latham said 'was due to the fault of my engine The conditions under which I made my start from Calais were magnificent and as I rose from the shore I felt confident that I would land in England I started at a speed of about fifty miles an hour and shot out straight over the channel rising to a height of 350 feet At times the monoplane rose higher into the air once being as high as 650 feet

"Everything ran smoothly until I was about seven miles from the French shore Then my motive power began to fail I tinkered with the engine and succeeded in getting it to work again but after another mile it stopped entirely This failure of motive power is impossible of avoiding in the present state of aeronautics

The descent of the airship into the channel was perilous owing to the failure of my device to prevent the airship striking the water too suddenly I managed to right the ship after she struck however, although she had dove headlong into the waves I wore a life-belt, but had no necessity for it as the airship floated easily until the Harpoon appeared

'I believe that my flight today proves the feasibility of taking my monoplane across the channel and I am making arrangements to try again within a week

Count Lambert, who is to try the channel flight with his Wright machine, complimented Latham on his flight Lambert says he will make his flight as soon as weather conditions are favorable

Chicago, July 20 —A raid on the headquarters of every Black Hand gang in Chicago will be made by the police within the next few days following the confession of Tony Baffa, eighteen revealing how Guiesippe Fillipelli a grocer was murdered for refusing to pay the Black Hand money demanded and disclosing the inner secrets of the Black Hand

Immediately after Baffas confession the detectives arrested Antonio and Pasquale Nudo, Ernesto Ferrese and Giuseppe Car and all are held today under indictment on charge of murder A fourth man mentioned by Baffa as being a member of the gang is Rafaelo Nudo The police have not yet located him and it is reported that he is in Pittsburg The Pittsburg police have been asked to arrest him

The police declare that half a dozen other Chicago Italians are involved in the alleged murder plot and that more arrests will follow as quickly as the men are rounded up

Detective Longabardi chief of the Black Hand squad, believes he will be able to get further confessions from some of the men already under arrest which will enable the police to strike the hardest blow the Black Handers have ever received here

Rises Dip When at an Elevation of Thirty Feet—Alexander Williams Escapes with a Broken Arm Dislocated Thumb and a Few Minor Injuries—Sees Visions of Collision in Descent

New York July 19—Alexander Williams member of the New York Aeronautic society which recently purchased from Glenn H Curtiss the aeroplane in which he made his successful flights last week attempted to make a flight on Hempstead plain at Mineola and as a result the aeroplane is almost a total wreck and Williams is laid up with a broken arm dislocated thumb and a number of minor bruises in various portions of his anatomy

While Williams had driven many an automobile is familiar with gas engines and is somewhat of a mechanic he seemed to lose complete control of himself as the aeroplane soared upward and when it had attained a height of 30 feet the craft careened sharply to the right swooped toward the earth and striking on end turned completely over then rolled on its back Williams remained pinned in his seat He muttered that some one had collided with him in the air Witnesses of the accident say it was merely because of a man attempting something which bares the nerves the body and the brain simultaneously and that Williams simply had stage fright

Curtiss Makes Flight

His attempted flight followed a successful one made by Edward Foster Willard also a member of the aeronautic society who remained in the air for 8 seconds making a short flight at an average height of 6 feet Curtiss then took the machine and made a beautiful flight Circling the starting place cutting several sharp turns and sailing at one time for more than 100 feet then shooting swiftly downward until he was only 20 feet above the earth The witnesses of this birdlike drop among them A M Herring himself an aeroplanist of note say that it was extremely spectacular

OLIVE BRANCH IS WAVED BY TAFT

Invites Conferees to the White House Spread

TARIFF PROBLEMS ARE TO BE SETTLED

Senate and House Leaders Are Clear at Sea

Clash Between Executive and Legislative Branches of the Government Over Question of Free Raw Materials—Hint That Plot To Defeat the Measure Is Being Hatched in the Senate

Washington July 20 — President Taft has invited all the Republican members of the tariff conference committee to take dinner with him tomorrow night at the White House The invitations did not say whether there was any purpose in the gathering other than sociability but it is assumed that he expects to be ready to report progress in getting votes for the abolition or reduction of duties on raw materials

Senator Crane spent an hour with the president and later talked with Senator Aldrich He indorsed the attitude of the president on the question of reducing the duties on raw materials Speaker Cannon visited the tariff conference chamber immediately after the adjournment of the session and he had a long talk with Senators Aldrich and Crane The speaker had been at the White House in company with Representative Dwight (N Y) the Republican whip

When Speaker Cannon left Senator Aldrich's room he said the conferees must frame the programs for passing the conference report through the house and the senate and that the representatives of the two branches would have to assume the responsibility for their actions This remark was understood to signify that a binding rule could not be looked for to carry an unpopular report through the house When pressed for an explanation however the speaker merely smiled He left his listeners free to put whatever construction they pleased upon his remarks

Cannon Good Natured

There was no indication of a lack of understanding between leaders of the senate and house The speaker exhibited his usual good nature and talked freely with the newspaper men about every subject except that which they desired to hear him discuss Senator Aldrich left the office building with Senator Crane to consider the possibility of putting through the senate a conference report providing for free iron ore and free oil and reduced duties on coal lumber and hides

If the mutterings of dissatisfaction heard about the senate offices may be taken as a criterion the senate leaders are confronted with no easy task Strangely enough many of the protests against the free raw material program are coming from the progressive Republican faction which fought hardest for downward revision

Many of the progressives come from states interested in cattle raising and they are opposed to free hides or even to a reduction in the duty Other insurgents notably Senators Bristow and Cummins who are not particularly interested in the question of free hides iron oil or coal expressed the opinion that the president should bring his influence to bear in a movement looking to reductions in the duties on wool and woolen goods cotton goods and other articles which enter into wearing apparel

Senator Borah stated that if the free raw material program was adopted some of the western senators would be afraid to go home and could not expect to continue representing their states in Washington He is thoroughly in sympathy with President Taft's attitude on the question of downward revision but declares that it should not be confined to raw materials The Idaho senator is authority for a report that there is in process of organization a combination of senators who will be pledged to defeat the conference report if it should provide for free coal and free hides These men are not concerned over the proposition to place oil and iron ore on the free list

About the capitol was a persistent rumor that the president would not be satisfied with free iron and ore and reduced duties on coal hides and lumber Many senators appeared to believe this report and expressed the opinion that he would insist upon hides and coal being placed upon the free list Senators who visited the White House did not confirm the report upon their return to the capitol but at the same time they were unable to contradict it

TUBES OPENED TO THE PUBLIC

New Jersey and Manhattan Are Now Connected

THREE MINUTES BETWEEN STATES

Hope of Citizens of New York Is Realized

Pair of $70 000 000 Tubes Is Opened Today Amid the Shrieking of Whistles and Clamor of Bombs More Tubes To Be Opened Within the Next Few Weeks—A Possibility of the Future

New York July 1—Miss New Jersey was wedded to old Father Knickerbocker at 10 o'clock this morning and the tunnel wizard William McAdoo who slipped on the ring of steel tubing admits that he had rather build such a tunnel than be mayor of New York

At 10 o'clock sharp a signal from Miss Harriet Floyd McAdoo daughter of the tunnels creator the first train began its trip under the Hudson river from New York to New Jersey and the hope of years three minutes from Jersey to New York was fulfilled

At the same instant every steamboat in the river above blew siren blasts of welcome But they could not be heard by the invited guests on the train fifty feet below the surface of the river nor could be heard the sound of the twenty exploding dynamite bombs which from Exchange Place announced the opening of the pair of $70 000 000 tubes

The First Train

At 10 15 the guests on the first train that passed under the surface of the river were escorted in automobiles to the court of honor in front of the Jersey City hall where the opening ceremonies were held There speeches were made by Mayor Wittpenn Governor Fort of New Jersey William McAdoo president of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad company and Charles M Jacobs chief engineer of the structure

At 10 o'clock the subscribers train passed under the river while at 10 o'clock they will be thrown open for traffic to the general public The official flower of the tunnel is a pink carnation and every commuter was today wearing one in honor of the given occasion

With the opening of the downtown tunnels of the Hudson and Manhattan railroad company this afternoon there will be recorded an event of mechanical skill almost without parallel in the world's annals

Two weeks more on August 2 and there will be opened the transverse tunnel connecting the Pennsylvania depot with the Erie and Lackawanna stations

More To Come

In two or three years there will be opened the extension from the uptown pair of tubes from Twenty Third street to the Grand Central depot When all these tunnels are completed a passenger from New England for the West can make his connections without ever seeing the skyline of New York

The building of the downtown tunnel connecting the financial district of New York with Jersey City has been a Herculean feat Under the gigantic terminal station in New York hewn out of solid rock at a depth of ninety feet is a little city in itself covering twenty two acres where are located enough stores and booths to tempt the average housewife to do all her shopping and miss nothing The tunnels built in twins each separated by thirty feet Trains going in one direction use one tunnel while trains in the opposite direction use the other There are eight tracks four in each tube It is estimated that to start with 100 000 000 persons per annum will use the tube which can easily accommodate 250 000 000 persons every year The tubes are ninety feet below the surface of Hudson river while in some places there is forty feet of earth between the bottom of the river and the top of the tubes

SUMMER WORK OF A GIRL COUNTRY STUDENT

How a Girl Finds Occupation and Pleasure.

HELPS CHILDREN TO AMUSE THEMSELVES

The Girl Students Gives the Mother of Little Ones a Chance To Enjoy a Little Rest and Recreation—The Pay Is Small, but the Conditions Are Found Pleasant.

"For three months last summer I earned $15 a month and my board, and besides had a pleasant outing," said a girl who is taking a course in teachers college and is working her way through. "I looked after three children too large to have a nurse and too small to be trusted out alone. I can't call myself a nursery governess because I did no teaching. As I didn't put the children to bed nor have anything to do with their clothing I wasn't a nurse, so I just call myself a youth's companion and let it go at that.

"The place came to me through the woman's exchange. A client had asked for a maid, specifying that she should be a woman of refinement with whom she could trust her larger children. When I had made my fourth or fifth call to see if they had any opening for me I was told about this place in an apologetic sort of way, the woman in charge not thinking that I'd like to take a servant's place. I told her that so far as I could see it was just being a summer governess with the classes left out.

"The wages offered was $25 a month, but when my employer saw me she suggested of her own accord that it might be pleasanter for me to receive less wages and board out. By this arrangement I was able to have a room to myself. Though she was too tactful to say anything about it, I am quite certain she had expected to get some one to look after her children who would fit right in with the servants.

"She said she would put me to board in as nice a house as was to be found in the resort and near enough for me to walk back and forth to her cottage. She kept her word to the letter, for I am not only among nice people but have a comfortable room. Though I do not know the exact amount of board she pays for me I am sure it is more than $10 a month. When at the end of last summer she told me that I had proved myself invaluable to her and that she wanted me to promise to come back this year I gladly accepted.

"My day begins at 8, when I walk over in time to have breakfast with the children. The mother hasn't come down to breakfast since I was added to her staff of assistants, and if you could see how much better she looks at the end of the summer you would certainly agree that the rest and change were needed.

"After breakfast I take the children to the beach or for a walk into the woods if it is fair; if rainy or threatening I amuse them in the house. When I say I amuse them I mean only that I set them at something to amuse themselves.

"I also taken luncheon with the children in the middle of the day. It is the one meal at which they are allowed to have meat, so it is called their dinner. After this second meal there is usually something in a social way going on for one or both of the girls, and though I do not actually dress them I see that the maid does it properly and then I take them to fill the engagement.

"If I do not have to remain with them I take the little boy along, and after dropping his sisters we go off and have a good time by our lone selves, as he always calls it. He is a lovely little chap, but like all of his sex wants your undivided attention.

"In the afternoon, usually by 6, I take my charges home and turn them over to the woman who acts as parlor maid, and attends to dressing and putting the children to bed. There was a baby last summer only six months old. It had a trained nursery maid, who also had an eye to the larger children. This summer, as the baby is older, she has time to pay more attention to my youngsters.

"So far as I can see there is almost an unlimited field for girls situated as I am in this work. There are many mothers of well-to-do families who would be glad to get a woman of refinement to relieve them of the care of their older children during the summer months when they leave the city for a rest. As a rule such mothers get an extra maid and consider themselves fortunate if she is trustworthy without ever thinking of her as a guide for their children's manners either at the table or in general behavior.

"My employer during the winter months always takes breakfast with her children and luncheon also on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. She sends them off to school with a servant and often takes them for a walk or drive in the afternoon. She is really a devoted mother, but, as she says, in the summer it is impossible for her to keep them out of doors as much as they need, take her meals with them and at the same time get the rest and recreation that she needs.

"No, I never try to teach them anything in particular. I mean by that no regular lessons. All I do is to talk to them intelligently and try to answer their questions. Say we go to the beach and come across an unusual shell. We exchange opinions as to what sort of shell it is and the habits of its former inhabitants.

"When we strike something that I don't know about I own up, and at the first opportunity we go to the public library in the village and look it up. That was our plan last summer. This year we are equipped with several volumes on bird, insects and flowers.

"Now about my own recreation. Well, I have seven evenings in the week, and as my days are never very hard I am never too fatigued to enjoy my evenings. Living in a well kept boarding house among pleasant people, I have made several charming acquaintances and besides going about with Mrs. Blank's children has brought me into contact with several cottagers who have given me invitations to their evening entertainments. All of this counts to the good side in my summer diary.

"At the end of the last season I found on comparing notes with other students that I had enjoyed myself about as much as any of those who couldn't go home. Fifteen dollars a month is not a large salary for these days, but I would much prefer to have that amount earned in the way I get it than double the amount earned in a more trying position."—New York Sun.

JAPAN LOSING IN CHINA.

The reports which come from eastern Asia that Japanese influence is waning in China and Russia is again gaining favor in Peking, might not be taken seriously if it were not for the military activity of Japan i Manchuria. Instead of withdrawing all or a large part of the troops still in that Chinese province, the Mikado's forces are being strengthened. There are about 22,000 Japanese soldiers at Mukden, alone, and that large garrison is being augmented by artillery and cavalry as well as infantry.

Such preparations can mean only one thing—fear of trouble with Russia, or Russia and China together. There is nothing in local conditions in Manchuria to call for the presence of any Japanese forces, except a small guard along the railroad line which is in possession of the Japanese, part of the way and of Russia the rest. The military movements of the islanders indicate that they believe a serious conflict is possible.

Russia certainly would not court trouble with Japan now, acting alone. If there is anything in the attitude of the Czar's forces or diplomatic representatives which justifies suspicion that war with Japan is looked for in the near future the cause must be sought in the antagonism which has developed between Japan and China. For the sake of Russian prestige and Russian influence in the Far East the government at St. Petersburg might venture far rather than leave China unsupported in a reasonable stand against Japanese encroachments If Russia and China act together they may well give the "elder statesmen" at Tokyo much to think about, for two such empires would be almost overwhelmingly by their very bulk and mass and the length of the military front which they might force the Japanese to attack.

Meanwhile the constant fear of the rulers of China that their country will be made the victim of schemes of spoliation, either by Japan or by European powers, opens the way for bettering the position of the United States in the Chinese empire. This country is not distrusted. America is suspected of no plots or enterprises inimical to the safety and welfare of China. Chinese gratitude for the part American statesmanship has played in protecting China's interests in the past may well be given deeper significance by Chinese need of American friendship and aid in the future.—Cleveland Leader.

FEAR OF DEATH.

It is as natural to die as to live—and as easy. Practically all the distress witnessed as taking place in the act of dying is the automatic tissue struggle against dissolution, and is not recognized by the individual who seems to be acutely suffering. Occasionally, in the delirium of fever, in uremia and other intoxications, in certain of the brain degenerations witnessed in old age, there is an exhilaration or happy, peaceful calm that pervades the final scene. * * * Usually everything is dulled, blunted, so that at the border line between life and death it is often difficult, even impossible, for a certain time, to say whether the soul has fled or not. It was long debated in medical circles whether or not there was a reliable test for death.—E. L. Keyes, M. D., in Harper's magazine for July

The fear of death, therefore, is not instinctive, and it never manifests itself in those who are actually dying. "Sense endureth no extremities," said Sir Thomas Browne, and oblivion shares with memory a great part even of our living beings. There is no physical horror of death observable in beasts and insects Humanity acquired it, Dr. Keyes believes, through "centuries of religious teaching." There is comfort in the thought that it is never felt save by those who have a reasonable prospect of the continued enjoyment of life.—New York Times.

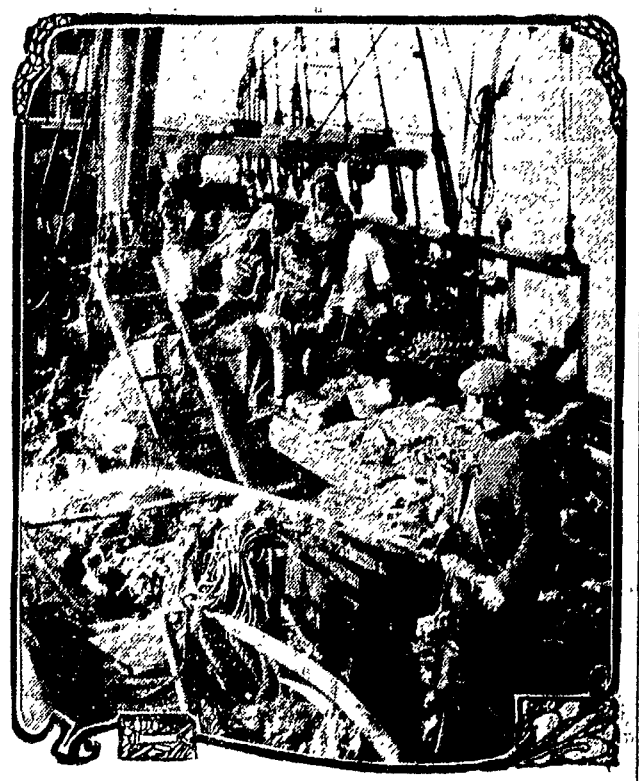
SCENE ABOARD PEARY'S SHIP JUST BEFORE DASH FOR POLE



The accompanying illustration was reproduced from one of a half dozen photographs recently received from the Peary arctic expedition, which left the United States a year ago in search of the north pole. The photographs were taken on board Peary's ship, the Roosevelt, just before his party left Etah, north Greenland, for the dash toward the pole. A force of Eskimos is engaged in cutting up walrus meat to be dried for food. After being dressed the meat is washed with a hose and then hung up to dry. Peary was last heard from on August 17, 1908, when he left Etah, the most northern habitable spot on the globe, for his trip across the hundreds of miles of eternal snow and ice toward the pole. Arctic experts and scientists believe that the Peary party will be heard from late in August or early in September, and they will be surprised if Peary does not report having reached the pole, for the expedition was the best equipped and planned of any that has ever entered the arctic circle.

Mr Amann will leave the service of the Marion Railway, Light & Power company, August 1, to become chief assistant electrician at the plant of the Marion Steam Shovel company. His new position will be one that requires the ability of an expert electrician and carries with it a lucrative salary.

During his connection with the street car service in Marion, Mr. Amann has made many friends. Under his administration as superintendent the company has witnessed several important changes and the service has been greatly improved.

NARCOTIC POISONING THE CAUSE OF DEATH

Statement as to Death of Mrs. John Cramer.

AN AUTOPSY HELD BY THE CORONER

Coroner Hinklin Refused To Make a Statement Tuesday — Husband of Unfortunate Woman Tells Story of His Wife's Illness and Death. Treatment She Received.

Mrs John Cramer, whose funeral was held at the Pleasant Hill church, Tuesday, died of drug narcosis, or narcotic poisoning according to Dr. J. B Taylor, who signed the young woman's death certificate to that effect, Tuesday.

Tuesday morning, Coroner W. H. Hinklin held an autopsy at the Cramer home, No 419 Mark street. Drs A Rau, A M Crane, F. L. Hedges, H W Sager, H J Lower, F C Smith and J. B Taylor were present. Coroner Hinklin, when asked the result of the postmortem operation, replied that a chemical test had not been made and that he would not know until then. He refused to make a statement.

Dr. Taylor declared that the woman's heart, lung and kidneys were found normal. "The woman died of narcotic poisoning," he declared.

Mrs Cramer died, Monday morning at 11:15 o'clock, after having taken a capsule and three tablets, for a nervous attack, given her by Dr H. W Sager, who had attended her five weeks ago when her father, Lemuel Holland, of near Morral, died and Mrs Cramer suffered of nervous shock.

The heart-broken husband was seen by a reporter for the Star, Tuesday morning. He told of having gone to the office of Dr. Sager Sunday evening.

"I know what to give her," the husband says Dr Sager said to him. "She has the same trouble that she had before."

Mr Cramer says he told the doctor that she had suffered another nervous attack, and Dr. Sager gave him two capsules and a number of tablets. "I don't remember whether I was to give her the tablets every hour or every two hours," he said, but I know I gave her a capsule about 8 o'clock Sunday evening, and was to give her the other in the morning. Between time I had given her three tablets, and at 4 o'clock Monday morning, she grew worse, and I wanted to go after the doctor. My wife said she thought it was the medicine taking off it and that she would soon get better, but she kept getting worse and I went after Dr. Sager at 5 o'clock. He came out and gave her two hypodermic injections."

The young husband's eyes welled with tears as he continued.

"And what do you think happened then? That doctor had the nerve to call me out on the porch and tell me that he did not know what ailed my wife, that he never had a case like it. I don't know who called Dr. Taylor, but when he came about 8 or 9 o'clock, he said that my wife was poisoned just as soon as he entered the door. Then he called three other doctors and they all said she was poisoned. They said this in the presence of witnesses.

"I don't know what they could find out from a postmortem, this morning, after the undertaker embalmed the body yesterday afternoon, if the body was embalmed. The doctors told me they would let me know what caused my wife's death, before noon."

The corpse was embalmed by the undertaker, Monday afternoon. Dr. Taylor, when asked about the body being embalmed and an autopsy being held afterward, declared that would make no particular difference in arriving at the cause of death.

Coroner Hinklin, on the contrary, said that the fact Mrs. Cramer had been embalmed would make it difficult to determine the exact cause.

Mrs Cramer is survived by her husband, her mother, five brothers and one sister. The brothers are Howard, Henry, Roy, Dewey and Arthur Holland, the latter residing in Michigan, and Mrs Charles Henry, of Upper Sandusky.

Short funeral services were held at the house, Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

BURKE AND KORTE IN PROSPECT COURT

They Give Bonds for Appearance When Wanted.

Edward Burke and Alfred Korte, arrested here Monday by Marshal Lauer, of Prospect, on a charge of violating the Rose local-option law, were taken to Prospect, Monday afternoon, and arraigned before Mayor Joseph Huff. The arrest of the men was made on the affidavit of Wilbert E Stillwell. Burke pleaded not guilty to the charge against him and his hearing was set for next Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock. He furnished a bond of $200 for his appearance at that time. Korte also pleaded not guilty to the charge against him, and his hearing was set for next Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock. He also furnished a bond of $200 for his appearance.

By William T. Ellis.

The International Sunday-School Lesson for July 25 Is "Paul's Second Missionary Journey — Athens." Acts 17:16-34.

No phrase better describes the life of the western world today than the familiar sentence of Dr. Luke, "Now all the Athenians and the strangers sojourning there spend their time in nothing else but either to tell or to hear some new thing." That is present-day society. That is our modern city life. That is the genius of the village woman's club. That is the twentieth century newspaper. Our times are madly bent upon discovering the latest sensation in earth or heaven or on Mars, or in the mysterious other that envelops us.

Let it be frankly confessed that a large part of the world today is engaged in a desperate endeavor to ward off inevitable joylessness. Our search for novelty is but an attempt to escape from ourselves. Dilettantism is a hall-mark of our age. Enthusiasm is accounted bad form. Conviction does not comport with culture. A self-satisfied sitting apart and a cynical survey of the passing show is the favorite attitude of the modern man and woman.

Ancient Center of Culture.

All this was even more true of Athens than it is of today, when Paul found himself in this one of the three great metropolises of the world. Athens had glory and pride. It was still a great city and had been a greater. "In its prime it sent forth more great men in one hundred years than all the rest of the world could show in five hundred." There were Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Demosthenes, Aeschylus, Sophocles, Aristides, Themistocles, Phidias, Xeno, Epicurus, Thucydides, Xenophon and Pericles. Cultured Paul, the university man, must have felt his nerves tingle as he moved amid the sculptures and architecture so closely associated with these great names.

His present problem was how to arrest and arouse this effervescing life of Athens upon a greater theme than ever before had come to its attention. He saw this visit to Athens as one of the great opportunities of his life. He proved himself worthy to stand with the best of the Athens teachers by his eloquent speech. He was not merely a missionary of the new faith; he was a great cosmopolitan and philosopher. His address was adroit, adaptable and skillful—an application of his own principle of "being all things to all men that he might by all means save some." For to Paul there must have come the vision of an Athens converted to Christ, with all its art and skill suffused by a new vitality and a new purpose. He dreamed of the tremendous abilities of this queen city placed at the service of his Master. Small wonder that he coveted this jewel for his King.

A Great Soul's Indignation.

A people that consistently gives itself to pleasure-seeking as its chief aim is bound to atrophy its capacity for all intense emotions. The pleasure-seeker gradually becomes able to look unmoved upon the most terrible spectacles. Moral degeneration inevitably follows in the wake of putting pleasure first.

Into every such community a great soul enters, as Paul entered Athens, and finds himself deeply stirred with indignation. It is no credit to a Christian that he cannot get angry. Christ was tremendously moved by the iniquitous spectacles which He beheld, and His greatest apostle had a similar capacity for abhorrence. He found Athens beautiful, cultured, graceful Athens crowded full of idols. A Roman poet had declared that it was easier to find gods than men in Athens.

These shrines and figures of divinities which lined all the highways represented not merely error, but, what was worse, they stood for indifference. When a people have many gods they cannot be loyal to any one god. This multitude of deities spoke eloquently of the light-mindedness of the Athenians. They, like some modern successors, were not particular as to what men believed. They could say, as is so often said today, "One religion is as good as another." Such a statement reveals vitiated power of thought. The so-called tolerance, which possesses no convictions, is merely a state of mental debilitation. Every great man believes something tremendously. A fair indictment of much modern education is that it only goes far enough to cut the nerve of conviction.

In contrast with the Athenian way, we can hear Paul as he preached in the synagogue. How his eloquence must have blistered the Jews who had become inured to the sights of Athens. With what terrible words did he recall them to the standards of Moses and their own pure faith. The very presence of such an intense and vital character as Paul in a community is a tonic.

A Street Preacher.

The man who believes something which he feels belongs to the whole world and believes it with a deeper earnestness than his regard for the proprieties of for life itself, can not be kept bottled up within the forms of conventional procedure. No synagogue could hold Paul in the presence of Athenian conditions. He went morning, noon and night to the public square to debate upon these profound truths of which he knew himself to be the custodian. Even the Stoics and Epicurians who resorted thither were stirred to some fresh interest at the prospect of a new doctrine. "New thought" had never so attractive a sound to modern Athenian as did the rumor of new teaching to these idlers in Athens of old.

Paul became a fad, even as the turbaned Indian babu who visits America becomes the lad with idle women. They wanted to hear more of his doctrine—not because they felt it to be important, but simply because it was new. Their interest was purely speculative. They desired to titillate the weary nerve of interest. They were early members of the tribe of church rounders who weary of the preaching and worship and work of any simple congregation, and spend their time in going from church to church to taste the style of different preachers.

On Mars Hill.

Paul was succeeding in his purpose. He wanted to awaken the interest of the city in himself, that he might transfer that interest to the Christ whom he preached. Then, as now, the problem of awakening a whole city's interest was no small one. No one has written the heartbreak of the preacher of the gospel who comes to a great modern city burdened with the message of God to the people, and then is compelled to watch the city go on its idle way past his church door, untouched and uncaring.

Paul had cleverly planned to get a hearing for himself from the whole city. He was borne to Mars hill before the court of the Areopagus, the center of philosophic debate. He knew, when he was called upon for a full statement of his principles, that the whole crowd would resort thither and Athens would be set to humming with a discussion of the Crucified. We may easily imagine how Paul prepared for that speech. His every thought was an inarticulate prayer for divine guidance. Near and far he sought for phrases and metaphors and illustrations. If he failed to be interesting he would fail altogether. And if he failed to be tolerant he would get no hearing. He would have to reason from what was known to them up into the realm of what they had yet to learn. How well he succeeded we know from so much of the speech as has been preserved to us.

A Classic Speech.

"And Paul stood in the midst of the Areopagus, and said;

"Ye men of Athens, in all things I perceive that ye are very religious. For as I passed along, and observed the objects of your worship, I found also an altar with this inscription, 'To an Unknown God.' What therefore ye worship in ignorance, this I set forth unto you. The God that made the world and all things therein, He being Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is He served by men's hands, as though He needed anything, seeing. He himself giveth to all life, and breath and all things; and He made of one every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, having determined their appointed seasons, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek God, if haply they might feel after Him and find Him, though He is not far from each one of us; for in Him we live and move, and have our being, as certain even of your own poets have said.

"'For we are also His offspring.'

"Being then the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and device of man. The times of ignorance therefore God overlooked, but now He commandeth men that they should all everywhere repent; inasmuch as He hath appointed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by the man whom He hath ordained, whereof He hath given assurance unto all men, in that He hath raised Him from the dead."

Great Effort's Little Effect.

When the sermon began to bear home upon the convictions of his hearers the crowd grew restive. Some jeered at his preaching of the resurrection. The did not like anything so crude and unrefined. Others, with the immemorial procrastination of the cowardly, promised to hear more at a later season. The general impression made by this masterpiece of oratory was comparatively slight. The hardest kind of soil for gospel sowing is among semi-cultured people who feel themselves confident to sit in judgment upon all things above and below. Possessed of a shallow education which comes short of intense conviction, they feel themselves beyond the moving power of teacher or preacher. Better is it to preach to a company of prisoners or of rank pagans than to attempt to quicken to action and to newness of character the average congregation of dilettantes and doctrinaires.

There were a few converts from the Mars hill speech. It was not a failure. The time later came when the Parthenon at Mars hill was a Christian church. Even one of the members of the court of Areopagus, Dionysius, and a noted woman named Damaris, were among the converts. The speech no doubt established the religion of Jesus in that community as worthy of respectful attention and consideration. Into the midst of the multitude of philosophies was projected this new one, challenging attention and holding forth its sublime claims to supremacy and allegiance.

MARION MUST WAIT FOR NEW ISSUE OF PENNIES

Bankers Fail To Order Any Lincoln Coins.

Their Circulation Here Will Be Delayed a Month or More—It Is Difficult To Get the New Coins—A Government Provisions.

Marion bankers said, Tuesday, that they do not expect any of the new Lincoln pennies to arrive here until next month or perhaps later. One banker said that his bank had made no order for the new pennies. "It always takes so long to get new coins, when you do order them, we decided not to order any of the new pennies," he said.

The Lincoln penny supplants the old "Indian head" copper. Already there have been several inquiries about the new issue at the local banks.

"Ask any one what the design is on the penny now in circulation and the chances are he will tell you that it is the head of an Indian wearing a war-bonnet, but it is not," declared a local banker, as he held one of the pennies between his thumb and forefinger. "The artist designed this head from the profile of a girl and the supposed feathers are merely olive leaves arranged in a circle."

The new penny, at any rate, will bear the likeness of Abraham Lincoln on the side now occupied by the Indian head or profile of a woman.

As an assurance that the new penny will be popular, the government has provided that it must remain in circulation twenty-five years at least, as this is the regulation touching all coins of the United States monetary system.

The party gained entrance and took possession of the house, pulling down the blinds to await the return of the unsuspecting host and hostess. On the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm, they were surprised to seeing the yard filled with baby buggies and gocarts and the plans of those on the interior was spoiled. POLICE VAUDEVILLE IN THE MAYOR'S COURT

In the Trial of One of the Alleged Bootlegging Cases.

MRS. BATENSTIEN IS GIVEN SCOTCH VERDICT

Of "Not Proven," the Mayor Doubting Credibility of State's Witnesses—Clashes Between Attorneys—Officer McDonough Sees Plot To Damage His Political Aims.

A motley throng filled the mayor's office during the greater part of Friday afternoon and evening, the attraction being the hearing of Mrs. Mattie Batenstein, charged with the illegal sale of liquor.

There were many vaudeville features introduced to keep the crowd in good humor, and there were, time to time, pleasing prospects of a fight between opposing attorneys and witnesses.

The prosecuting witnesses were Wilbert Stillwell and J. C. Bennett, who were employed by the Law and Order league to ferret out violations of the Rose local-option law.

Messrs Evmon and Thompson appeared for the prosecution and L. E. Myers and Fred W. Warner for the defense. The hearing speedily developed into a trial of the detectives and the mayor permitted the inquiry to wander far afield.

The case was based on the alleged sale by the defendant to Stillwell and Bennett, on July 5, of three bottles of beer at the home of her son-in-law, Miles Anderson. One of the bottles, labelled by the men, was produced in court, the others having been drank on the premises at time of purchase, it was claimed.

Stillwell's testimony in brief was to the above effect. He admitted that he had been employed by the Law and Order league to secure testimony against liquor law violators and had been partially paid for his work and that his employment had been made through John Bain and Otis Barnhard.

The defense elicited the fact that Stillwell had left Morrow county with another man's wife and that they had lived in California. The attorneys for the defense went into the story of his life and brought out many facts which had not the remotest bearing on the case, but were intended to impeach the credibility of the witness.

Stillwell claimed to have purchased drinks from many persons, giving names and places. Some of these parties have been arrested, some have pleaded guilty and others are yet to be prosecuted. He told of persons to whom he had given drinks, including Police Officer McDonough.

Bennett corroborated Stillwell in the main facts of his story as to the purchase of booze. The cross-examination elicited the information that Bennett had been arrested when a boy of thirteen years for assault and battery.

At the conclusion of the presentation of the state's case the defense moved to dismiss, but was overruled.

The defendant was then called to the stand and set up a complete denial. She admitted that she had seen Stillwell but not on the day of the alleged sale, when she spent the day with her daughter who was ill. She denied any acquaintance with Bennett, whatever.

It was during Mrs. Batenstien's testimony that Attorney Myers made a slurring reference to Bennett and Attorney Thompson come back with the hot retort that "if the truth were known Bennett probably stood higher in his home community than Myers did in his," and the court was compelled to interfere.

The son, daughter and son-in-law of the defendant testified in her favor.

B. E. Crow took the stand and swore to finding Stillwell and a stranger in a stall in his barn, drinking out of a bottle, and ordered them out This was a contradiction of Stillwell's testimony.

Then Jack McDonough, city police officer, who had been accused by the prosecuting witness of accepting a drink with him, was called, but declined to testify in his own behalf, until his witness fees were guaranteed by the mayor. When he finally took the stand, he proved a boisterous and disrespectful witness, assailed the city solicitor, threatened the prosecuting witness, and declared he had been dragged into the case to injure him politically. He denied Stillwell's story as to taking a drink with him, but admitted knowing Stillwell and claimed to have seen him several times when he was under the influence of liquor, but had not arrested him. He claimed he did not know Bennett.

The attorneys argued the case at length then the mayor summed up. He said that the majority must rule and that the majority had voted to abolish the traffic in liquor in this county and that the law must be obeyed and would be enforced. He was glad to have the assistance of the Law and Order league and other good citizens and felt they were honest in their efforts.

Reviewing the testimony, Mayor Scherff held that the state's witnesses were overborne by the weight of evidence and that the defense's witnesses were more entitled to credence. He knew that the defendant's husband provided amply for her and there was no reason why she should engage in such a traffic for profit.

In conclusion, the mayor held that there was not sufficient evidence to convict and dismissed the complaint.

EARL STOUFFER HOME FROM TRIP TO SPAIN

Where He Buys and Superintends Shipment of Shipload of Onions.

Earl Stouffer has returned home from Spain and is making a stay of a few days with his family here

Mr. Stouffer states that he had a very interesting trip abroad, as the pioneer in a venture in onions. He is one of the foremost experts in onions in the country, and was selected as the representative of the two big onion concerns of the United States, the concerns which practically control the business in a wholesale way.

While in Spain, which is one of the great onion producing countries, he purchased and superintended the packing of twenty-two thousand crates, a cargo which is now enroute to New York.

Some time ago, a New York concern conceived the idea of sending an onion expert abroad so that the product could be purchased at a better advantage, and the cargo could be packed and shipped under expert direction with a great saving to both producers and purchasers. Mr. Stouffer, as stated, was the choice of the concern and the other with which it joined interests in the venture, and is the first onion buyer to personally enter the field.

DIES SUDDENLY IN NORTH CAROLINA

Mrs. D. C. Downing, Formerly Miss Nellie Lodwig, Passes Away.

Friends in this city received a message, Saturday, announcing the death of Mrs. D. C. Downing, who was well known in this city as Miss Nellie Lodwig. She passed the greater part of her life in this city, until her marriage three years ago, when she went with her husband, a revenue collector, to North Carolina.

Mrs. Downing was about twenty-five years of age. Her death occurred after a brief illness, and following an operation in a hospital at Fayettesville, North Carolina.

The announcement of the death of Mrs. Downing came as a great shock to her friends, who had received a letter but a week ago from her, in which she was planning a trip here to pass the summer.

The funeral services were held, Saturday, at her home a few miles from Fayetsville and the remains were interred there.

PRACTICAL JOKER CALLS OUT MILITIA

Local Company Under Arms To Suppress Imaginary Riot.

Acting on private advices from Upper Sandusky, Friday evening, that trouble was teared in the Indian village over the trial of Charles Hinkleman, charged with selling liquor contrary to law, and that military assistance might be called for, Captain E. O. Richardson held his men at the armory of D company until 11 o'clock ready for an emergency call.

No call came and the men dispersed.

A telephone message, next morning, from Upper Sandusky, stated that there were no evidences of trouble during the trial, which was adjourned at 3 o'clock in the afternoon until Monday morning. The positive assurance was given that no person entertained fears of a riot, and it is apparent that some practical joker simply sought to cause the company a season of annoyance.

WHEN METEOR FELL IN CRAWFORD COUNTY

Magazine Story Contradicted by a Happening in 1879.

FALLING AEROLITE INSTANTLY KILLS

The Stone, After Cutting Down a Tree, Passes Completely Through a Man's Body and Buries Itself Deep in the Ground, Leaving Hole About the Size of a Common Bucket.

The Bucyrus Telegraph calls attention to the statement in a magazine of recent date to the effect that a death had never been known to result from a person being struck by a falling meteor, and then proceeds to disprove the statement. It quotes from the Bucyrus Journal of November 17, 1879, an article relating the death of David Meisenthaler, of Whetstone township, on November 14.

The article quoted is as follows and is republished because the incident seems to have been without a parallel:

"As David Meisenthaler, the well-known stockman, of Whetstone township, was driving his cows to the barn, about daylight, the morning of the 14th, he was struck by a aerolite and instantly killed. It appears as it the meteor had come from direction a little west of south, and fell obliquely at an angle of about sixty degrees, for it first passed through a tall maple, cutting the limbs as clean as if it had been a cannon ball, and then struck him apparently on or under the shoulder, passing clean through him, obliquely from below the right shoulder to above the left hip, and buried itself about two feet in the soft, black ground.

"The poor man's head, hands, and legs are uninjured, but the greater part of his body seems to have been crushed into the earth beneath the terrific aerolite, which is about the size of a common bucket of a roughly-round shape. It appears to be formed of what is called iron pyrites. From the fact that Mr. Meisenthaler is known to have had a large sum of money in his pocket book, that he kept it in the breast pocket of his coat, and that it is missing: it is surmised that it is under the aerolite.

"The stupid idea prevailed that the body must not be touched until a coroner or magistrate had seen it, and with the head and legs and ghastly hole were suffered to lie just as they had been torn apart Torn fragments of his clothing can be seen at the edge of the hole. Nothing will be done until the coroner or a magistrate arrives."

FALLS FROM LADDER AND FRACTURES RIB

Aged Carpenter Meets with Accident and Sustains Severe Injuries.

John Ralston, aged seventy-nine years and residing on Cherry street, fell from a ladder while working at a barn on the rear of the property of S. H Bartram, on east Center street, at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. Ralston is a carpenter by trade and was engaged to nail some strips on the barn. He was working on an eight-foot ladder and was only a few steps from the ground when the ladder turned with him and he fell. He was unable to get up and, crawling towards the house, was seen by one of the tenants and assisted to the house. Dr. A. M Crane was called and found him to be suffering of a badly bruised back and a cracked rib The injured man was taken to his home in a hack

BIG CROWD APPLAUDS BAKER'S FINE MUSIC

Third Star Band Concert a Great Success.

AN AFTERNOON OF GREAT ENJOYMENT

Lincoln Park Has a Crowd of One to Two Thousand, Most of Them Attracted by the Musical Program, Which Was Freely Applauded. Concert at Garfield Park, July 25.

It was a large and much pleased crowd that attended the third of the series of Star band concerts, at Lincoln park, Sunday afternoon. Director Baker had selected a fine program and the band gave a fine rendition to ever number. Several times the applause was sufficient to justify a repetition, but the program was carried out just as published.

The afternoon was ideal. Neither seashore, lakes or mountains could afford a more delightful bit of weather. The sun was warm enough to make shade inviting, but it was not broiling hot. The park was free from dust, and the grass clean, and hundreds found it possible and agreeable to lounge and enjoy the music.

The crowd in attendance was estimated variously at from one to two thousand people. Street car service was extended to the north Main street entrance to the park, which proved to be easily reached in that way. So many vehicles—carriages and automobiles of all sorts—were never seen in the park before, and without police assistance or interference they were handled without obstructing drives or footpaths. A similar array of carriages has never been seen in Marion, except at the fairgrounds, during fair week.

On the whole it was a merry, happy crowd, much like a great big picnic, except for the absence of the spread, and the concert, as a Sunday afternoon attraction and as a musical entertainment, was rated a great success.

The next number of the Star series will be given at Garfield park, east Marion, next Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock.

PASSENGER TRAIN HIT BY LIGHTNING

Bolt Goes Through Roof of Car Between Waldo and Marion.

The passengers aboard the Pennsylvania passenger train which left here at 7:28, Thursday evening, had an experience that is probably without parallel in the history of railroading.

A heavy electrical storm was raging when the train reached a point about half way between Marion and Waldo and the day coach was struck by lightning. The bolt descended through the roof and tore great splinters from the upper woodwork, also shattering the windows on one side of the car. All the passengers were badly shaken up and much frightened but no one was injured.

It has always been held that moving cars are immune from lightning strokes, but tradition is in this case broken.

JOURNEY ON WHEEL THROUGH IRELAND

Four Months' Outing at a Cost of $300.

TWO WOMEN WHO WANT KNOWLEDGE

They Do Not Care for Personally Conducted Tour of Europe and Take Their Own Plan for Making Trip—Friendly People Are the Rule in Ireland.

"Two hundred dollars and four months in Europe—that is what I had and what I wanted to get out of it. When a woman has saved into her thirties without having had a hundred dollars apart from her home and while her friends have been in almost every quarter of the globe you know how she feels.

The speaker was a woman from the Southwest who stopped in New York the other day on her way to make her eighth wedding trip abroad.

"The question with me was whom to go with rather than where to go," she went on. "As I had never been abroad all countries were equally attractive. The main point was to get some one who was willing to travel in the cheap way necessary to make my $200 hold out for four months.

"That person when found proved to be the college chum of a friend I had known since my girlhood. She declared that though we had never seen each other before she was sure we would get on charmingly for the simple reason that both of us wanted to go to Europe and neither was willing to be tied down to a personally conducted tour.

"It was in March that we met. Within half an hour we had decided to take a bicycle trip through Ireland with a three weeks' stay in Paris as an ending. My new friend was anxious to go to Ireland, because she had been studying Gaelic. She offered to give me the benefit of her instruction and lend me all her books on the subject. As there was still two months before we were to leave I accepted her offer.

"My friend took her sketch box and I my camera and both of us took our wheels. The cost of our ocean voyage was reduced as far as possible by taking a round-trip ticket by one of the slower steamship lines. We had practically all the comforts to be had on the faster and more expensive lines. The difference seems to be that whereas the expensive lines make the trip in a week's time and less the slower lines require ten days or more.

"I first set foot on foreign soil at Queenstown. After a two days' stay here we began our tour first on our wheels, then jaunting car. We also traveled by train when desirable. Everywhere we were received with the greatest friendliness, and in exchange for our stories and descriptions of America the peasants, old and young, told us the legends and folk tales of their country and sang for us quaint Gaelic songs. All through our trip to Ireland America was a word to conjure with. We had only to let our nationality be known to get what we wanted and often more.

"After spending a few days in Galway we pushed on into Connemara, where we spent two delightful weeks more than twenty miles away from the nearest railway station. Here my friend's knowledge of Gaelic was convenient as English is almost an unknown tongue. During these two weeks we enjoyed delightful bathing and boating in the arms of the sea penetrating the western coast.

"Finally tearing ourselves away from the blue lochs and brown bogs we turned our faces eastward toward Dublin. My friend had calculated our time in such a way that we arrived in the Irish capital just in time for the great national Gaelic festival. After a three weeks' stay, every minute of which we both enjoyed, we left for London, where we had decided to spend the remaining three weeks of our time instead of going to Paris.

"When we landed back in our home town I had spent all but five dollars of my $200 and had been away three days over four months. Our passage over and return had cost seventy-five dollars. We both gave five dollars in tips aboard ship and paid five dollars more for the transportation of our wheels. Our hotel bills for the first six weeks' touring came to forty-five dollars each and never once did we have other than comfortable quarters among kindly people.

"Throughout our trip we found the village hotels and country inns more than fairly comfortable, well kept and inexpensive. We seldom paid more than five dollars a week for room and board. I mean for a room apiece for only on one occasion were my friend and I forced to occupy the same room.

The roads in Ireland are so good that I only spent $1 10 on bicycle repairs, while my friend got off with half as much. Wheeling is still very popular in the Emerald isle and my friend and I attributed it to the great excellence of the roads. Though I have since taken several wheeling trips the roads in Ireland remain fresh in my mind as the best all in all, I have ever traveled over.

"We found the first class railroad fares in both Ireland and England somewhat higher than in this country. Second class rates are about equal to fares in the United States and third class rates are considerably lower. After one experience first class we decided to try third class on our next trip by rail and found it so comfortable that during the remainder of our stay we never thought of going any other way, but in no other country have I ever found third class travel as comfortable as it is in Ireland.

"Our railroad fares came to twelve dollars each. Our jaunting car trips cost another twelve dollars and our tramfare, hire and tram tickets cost four dollars. Laundry cost us ten dollars. Fees to the servants amounted to four dollars each.

"In Dublin our hotel bill was seven dollars a week and in London, where we lived in lodgings and took our meals in the most convenient place, our living expenses amounted to ten dollars a week, and really, now that I have had more experience, I consider that we were extravagant. I have since spent several weeks in London for eight dollars a week and have been fully as comfortable.—New York Sun.

WORRY.

Perhaps, after all, it is the beneficent intention of nature that man shall worry. To be sure, the physiologists tell us that this species of mental excitement says the nerves and injures the delicate convolutions of the brain. Besides, the philosophers say that worry is the most unphilosophical of all mental processes. What is to be will be, is their slogan, and so they go the tranquil way, treading perchance the primrose paths of dalliance, until they encounter a toothache or a mortgage, when they become as human as the lumbier mortals who know nothing of philosophy and care less.

And, therefore, so long as men and women are human they will continue to worry. In fact, the ordinary mortal would be wretchedly unhappy if he didn't have something to expend his surplus mental energy on. If he cannot worry over the weather, he will worry over the possibility that next month the Hustlers may lose three games in succession. If he is not disposed to worry over the potential failures of the home team he may find a congenial field to worry in figuring out to his own satisfaction that the coal supply will be exhausted a few thousand years hence or that in 296 years there will be no more trees on the American continent. This is an excellent recreation in the gentle art of worrying and is highly recommended at this season of the year. There are few more delectable mental occupations than reclining in a comfortable swing beneath shady trees and worrying over the poor people centuries hence who will have neither wood nor coal.

And now, happily, there is another worry an ideal one, for those who have not enough to worry over in hot weather. A French scientist has figured out that the world's supply of food and the earth's capacity to produce enough will be exhausted in about ten centuries. This should prove a boon to those afflicted with the worry habit and relieve them of the necessity of thinking about the high cost of living or whether the earth is round or flat or the good book means this or that. But there is one thing that is worrying more than that. That is something worthy of the most expert worrier and that is worried because his neighbors would not join him in organizing a "Don't Worry Club."—Boston Post Express.

STAGE GOSSIP.

Edward Abeles will star in "The Pickpockets," by C. M. S. McLellan.

"The Climax" will remain at Weber's theater in New York for the rest of the season.

Mabel Taliaferro is to appear the coming season as star of "When Love Comes to All," by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson.

Robert Cummings and Charles Wyngate have been engaged for Margaret Anglin's company in "The Awakenings of Helena Richie."

The nameless play produced in Washington by the Students was titled by a contest. The successful title was "Two Women and a Man." It has not yet been decided whether the play will have a production in the fall.

One scene of "The Midnight Sons" is a reproduction of a theater, stage and audience. The scene German managers want to copy, and several managers from the other side will have the scene models shipped to Europe for their study.

The Savoy theater in Atlantic City and the Hyperion in New Haven both under the management of the Shuberts will be utilized by that firm this season as producing houses. Corinne will begin her season at the former house early in August and will be followed by Sam Bernard and several big music shows.

Politics and morality are seldom on speaking terms.

WOMEN ARE LEARNING TO HANDLE FIREARMS

More Women Now Who Know How To Shoot.

WIVES GO WITH HUSBANDS TO WOODS

They Make Good Company on Shooting Trip—Shooting Clubs for the Women in Various Cities and in the Country—Some of the Feminine Experts with Guns.

There has been a great increase in the last four or five years in the number of women who have learned to use firearms. In suburban cottage colonies frequented by New Yorkers, fads in for practising rifle and pistol shooting have been married with the result that women who once spent much time running to a golf or a tennis score are now practising for hours at trap or target shooting.

A Fifth avenue dealer in firearms has sold twice as many guns and pistols to women in the last two years as in the five previous years. On a recent evening he sold to a New York woman who owns an estate in Canada, half as big, nearly, he thought, as New York state and abounding in big game, two high-grade rifles, and he was about to ship to a northwestern state a rifle selected by a southern woman who was going hunting with her husband.

That foreign makers are noticing the trend of things is shown by their putting on the market guns for women, light in weight and of little recoil. Some of these weapons are sufficiently ornate to cost $500 and more. A gun bought not long ago by a New York woman cost $450, and had a goldsmith set in the frame and hunting scenes engraved on the stock and the barrel. This gun is to be an actual service, the buyer intending to take it with her whenever she goes shooting, which is often.

The expensive guns are for the few. The rank and file of sportswomen use guns costing $10 or so and weighing about seven pounds.

In explaining the lively demand for women's pistols the retailer said that many of these women learned to handle pistols loaded with blank cartridges only and probably they would never touch a weapon if otherwise charged. The reason given for including a pistol in their outfit at all was that being as they do some part of every year in the country they believe it safer to have handy the means to scare off undesirable callers and to summon aid.

"At the same time," the dealer went on, "the average woman of today is not nearly so afraid of handling a pistol as women were when I started in business thirty years ago. As for women going on hunting trips with their husbands that was unheard of almost and it was equally rare to find a woman who could talk from experience about shooting small game, let alone big game.

"Today husbands and wives go hunting in company and women are included in many southern and [illegible] northern hunting trips. I will say this for the married men who [illegible] here: those who have wives are very handle a gun in good shape and awfully proud of them and glad to have them along when they go shooting. They pay their wives the compliment of letting them select their own guns and of bringing them along when they themselves purchase guns.

"What with the shooting ranges and the artificial target traps now established at most of the clubs patronized by New Yorkers who like out-of-door sports, it is easy enough for any woman to acquire a taste for gun and pistol shooting. During the last two or three years it has been common for parties of women to engage one of the shooting galleries in the upper part of New York for their exclusive use a couple of hours once or twice a week in midwinter, so as to keep up their target practice."

A club of women who shoot well has met for the past two winters in the Seventh-First regiment armory twice a week for one and a half hours of target practice under the direction of Sergeant Doyle, one of the crack shots of the regiment and medal winner at several tournaments. The membership is limited to about ten women.

Some of the ten have profited so well by the coaching of Sergeant Doyle that they are better shots than some of the men in the regiment. The women are far easier to teach and train than the men recruits. Said the sergeant:

"When the colonel told me that some ladies were coming here to practise and asked me to coach them a little I was very doubtful about what success I would have, but I was astonished to find how quickly my orders were understood, how easily my pupils carried out the orders and how painstaking and enthusiastic they were when practising.

"I found that in off shoulder shooting they learned to be pretty good marksmen in one season, that is with a couple of lessons a week for five or six months. Yes, I have been surprised to find coaching the club so easy."

One of the sergeant's pupils is a matron of about forty, whose nineteen-year-old daughter is also a member of the club. The mother is much the better shot, her usual record being nine bull's-eyes out of ten shots at a distance of fifty yards, shooting with a twenty-two-caliber rifle weighing seven and a half pounds. The usual record of the majority of the members is three bull's-eyes out of five shots.

The second best shot in the club is a frail looking young woman of the nervous type, apt to shake a bit after making a score. According to the sergeant neither great strength nor iron nerve is necessary for good shooting.

"The woman of nervous temperament raises her rifle, sights it, fires quickly. Trigger finger, eye, brain act in conjunction in a second," said he. "The nerves don't get a chance till after it is all over.

"The best shot in the club until she had an accident to her wrist was the most delicate and nervous woman of all. She was also the most enthusiastic. I notice that generally the most enthusiastic woman is the best shot or the best shot is the most enthusiastic woman.

"It is the same way with men. Enthusiasm is what does it, and the reason why teaching this club is no hard is that every member is enthusiastic.

"Oh, dear no. I don't suppose five of the ten women mean to hunt big game, game of any sort, in fact. The others practise merely for the pleasure of it."

In several instances the shooting score of a member of the club has enabled that of her husband, much to the satisfaction of both, says the instructor.—New York Sun.

SPONSOR OF THE CLERMONT II. AND FULTON'S SIGNAL BELL

Mrs. Alice C. Sutcliffe, a great-granddaughter of Robert Fulton, christened the Clermont II, a replica of the original steamboat with which the inventor navigated the Hudson river, when a launching took place at Mariner Harbor, Staten Island, on the 100th anniversary of the first successful steamboat trip. Mrs. Sutcliffe, who is the wife of Lieut. Stewart L. Woodford, made the dedicatory speech and later watched the launching. At the moment that the odd little vessel slid into the water several carrier pigeons were released to carry the news of the launching to various points on the Hudson. The bell which was used on the original Clermont was replaced aboard the new vessel and will be one of the horns from her bridge when she joins the grand naval parade on the Hudson next September. It is estimated that the Clermont will steam at a rate of four miles an hour.

TRAPPING ALLIGATORS IN SOUTHERN COUNTRY

Dogs of Assorted Sizes Are Used for Bait.

PLAN FOLLOWED IN SPANISH HONDURAS

The Dogs Are Staked Out and Serve To Attract the Alligators into Traps Carefully Laid—The Exciting Experience of a Traveler and Hunter in Tropics.

"Have any of you gentlemen ever been alligator hunting in the tropics?" a returned traveler from Central America asked a group of friends. "I tried it in Spanish Honduras, and it's great sport.

"The only things that were taken along besides some refreshments and a single lone six shooter were four of the commonest looking dogs I have ever laid eyes on. The party of us rode two or three leagues through the jungle to a small lagoon that was filled with alligators and very large snakes.

"A native had charge of the dogs. After we had taken good positions in the large trees he took a dog, the biggest of the pack, and led him down to the water's edge. The native climbed up a tree about 200 feet further up the line from us, while the dog, who was trained for the work, began barking as if his life depended on the amount of yelping he could do.

"'Look, look!' said my friend, who was in the tree with me, at the same time pointing over to the place where the dog was carrying off his little dance alongside the lagoon.

"I looked over and saw an immense alligator slowly sneaking through the water in the direction of the cur. The dog saw the saurian coming all the time but pretended not to. The alligator kept getting closer and closer until his feet touched the bottom and then he made a dash for the dog.

"The dog let him get within five feet of him and made a dash along a path cleared for the purpose. Alligators can run on the ground like race horses, but when they are after dogs they go just twice as fast. That particular 'gator gave the dog more than he could take care of and if it had not been for the short distance the race lasted the dog would have been caught.

"A large hole had been dug and covered over with brush to conceal the trap. It was fixed so that when the alligator got on top of the brush it would give way and Mr. Alligator fall into the hole, while the dog, by making a broad leap, would clear the trap and get over on the other side.

"The first alligator we caught was about twelve feet long. The native fixed the trap again and made ready for the next stunt. The gentleman in charge of the expedition said he wanted a small alligator for a pet around his camp, and a small dog was selected to bring about the desired result.

"After we had again taken our positions in the trees I noticed an alligator about four feet long come nosing his way through the water in the direction of that little cur who was barking and chasing himself up and down over the ground. In a couple of seconds the little dog and the little alligator were running through the bush toward the trap, which fell in when the four-footer touched it.

"If any one had told me that a big alligator would run after a big dog and a small alligator preferred a small dog I would have considered it a frivolous tale, but I saw exactly that thing with my own eyes. Just to demonstrate this another large dog was put through the same ceremony. Two or three small 'gators were near his stand but not one of them made a break for him. Pretty soon a big fellow paddled over toward the dog and made a break for him.

"As a fitting climax for our day's hunting it was decided to double up on the alligators, so we had the native fetch all four dogs to the edge of the lagoon. The four dogs stood up like horses waiting for the barrier to fly, slyly looking over their hindquarters to watch the approach of the enemy.

"Presently four alligators, two large and two small, crept out of the water and bolted for the dogs. The largest dogs were trailed by the largest alligators and the little dogs had little alligators running behind them, all making a bolt for the brush-covered pit. The first saurian was within a foot of the last dog when the trap was reached. Of course the dogs escaped, but the alligators went crashing through the brush."—New York Sun.

President Taft in Shadowgraph.

Outlined in a shadow cast on one of the pillars of the portico of the White House by another pillar a number of persons recently observed a striking likeness of President Taft. It was a profile and so perfect that any one who ever saw Mr. Taft would at once recognize it. If an artist had painted a perfect profile of the president on the pillar it could not have been better. All who saw it were startled at the striking resemblance.

COURTS DENOUNCED AT MASS MEETING

Speakers Declare Sworn Officers Refuse To Enforce Laws.

INDIGNATION EXPRESSED AT LOCAL CONDITIONS

Epworth Church Packed to Doors To Hear Protests—Ministers Scathingly Arraign Mayor and Police and Declare Prosecutor and Judge Refuse To Do Sworn Duty.

The indignation meeting held at Epworth M. E. church, Sunday evening, drew a crowd that packed the house to the doors.

The meet was announced for 7 30 o'clock, but it was 8 o'clock before Rev. D. H. Bailey, the pastor of Epworth church, introduced the first speaker, prefacing the first address by a few remarks on the purpose of the gathering and the conditions in Marion so far as official interference with the illicit liquor traffic in the city is concerned.

Rev Mr Bailey stated that when the local-option movement in Marion county was under way and before the election was held, the saloon men of the city announced that if the county was voted dry they would continue to do business and would not obey the law. He reviewed the conditions prevailing in the city, and made reference to what the Marion County Law and Order league has done and is trying to do to check the traffic in intoxicants, and how its efforts have been defeated by the attitude of the various courts of city and county.

The speaker said in substance: "We won a great victory when the city was voted dry. It was a glorious victory. But we have been defeated in practically every instance in the courts in the attempt to enforce the law. The people of the county registered their will in the election. Judge Young, Probate Judge Spencer, Mayor Scherff and the police have all taken oath to enforce the law. It is time for them to get busy or move out."

Rev. J. P. Currin, of the First Baptist church, was then introduced. He opened his address of about thirty minutes with reference to the local-option election and its results in the county and stated that Marion county was voted dry by the largest majority of any territory in the state. It was therefore the emphatic will of the people that the city and county should be dry, that the law should be enforced. The election gave the drys a great victory indeed, until the time for enforcement of the law was at hand and then defeat came.

Rev. Mr. Currin said he had but one truth to present. "Lack of alarm is the worst kind of alarm." People refused to be alarmed by the situation in Marion. They fold their arms and do nothing. As long as the people are awake and alive to things "Rat row" is meek, but as soon as the people refuse to be alarmed by the doings of "Rat row" it is active. A little genuine interest on the part of the people and "Rat row" retires to its holes, the pests are easily overcome. The people are full of latent possibilities. A little earnest individual effort and a little earnest combined effort and there will be no more bootlegging in Marion county. The people must, like the guns that guard San Francisco bay against intruders, say, "Thus far you may go, and no farther." The people are responsible for the things which are being done in Marion. There is a lack of alarm. The ministers and Christian workers alive to the situation must therefore sound the alarm, and the people must heed the warning. They are standing on a volcano. The eruption must come. There will be mob rule in Marion unless the people heed the seers and accept the call to go to work.

Rev. George E. Barnard, of the Free Baptist church, was next introduced. His theme was "A Day in the Courts of Marion." In his introductory remarks, the speaker stated that he spent seven hours in the courts of Marion, last Friday, and was afforded a fine example of how business is conducted in them so far as the prosecution of bootleggers is concerned. During a session of the probate court in the morning, the matter of the court's jurisdiction in handling a charge of illegal selling against Edward Burke was disposed of. The speaker said that those desiring the enforcement of the local-option law in Marion sought to prosecute offenders, not to prosecute any person. There was a genuine doubt in the mind of Probate Judge Spencer as to his jurisdiction in the matter. There was a genuine doubt in the minds of the attorneys. It was argued by the attorneys for the defense that the matter was not being properly presented to the court, and the argument had weight. The defense was given the benefit of the doubt and the matter was dismissed with the understanding that Prosecutor Justice might present it again in accord with the law as the judge understood it. The speaker said he believed the court was right in its decision and in the course of his remarks intimated that he believed the court acted in good faith.

Rev. Mr. Barnard then took up the matter of Prosecutor Justice being pressed to present an information against Burke in the probate court. He spoke of Justice partially refusing to act. Then came the question, "Is the prosecutor a servant of the people of Marion county?" If so, it was charged, he refuses to do his sworn duty.

In the afternoon, the speaker went to the mayor's court, where much of the afternoon and evening was passed in an effort to prove the prosecuting witness for the drys bad. Some things the defense was after were brought out, and some things the defense was not after were also developed as to the various degrees of badness of the prosecuting witness. The prosecuting witness was supported in his evidence by his witnesses, who said they did buy beer of the woman under arrest. The speaker said there was no real evidence that the men did not buy the beer, but only evidence to show that the witnesses for the defense did not see the beer sold. In the course of the testimony of the prosecuting witness he showed a disposition to protect some people, but it was forced out of him that he drank with one of the local policemen.

Rev. Mr. Barnard then told of the actions of the patrolman on the stand, when he was called to testify. He said the policemen cursed in open court, and said some things that would not bear repeating in the presence of a decent assembly. After the policemen had cursed for a time, and had railed the prosecuting witness a liar, the chief of police finally pushed him out of the room and the disgraceful scene was ended. As to the attitude of the mayor, it was charged that when he gave his decision, he stated that he had talked with the husband of the defendant about the matter out of court, and saw fit to believe the husband off the witness stand, just the same as if he had been called and testified. The mayor allowed the talk with the husband to influence him to the extent that he found the defendant not guilty.

Continuing Rev. Mr. Barnard stated: "Now we have been turned down by the judge of the common pleas court, the mayor and the prosecutor. Now we should turn them up. If you people will just come out and say you are with us we can have justice."

Rev. S. C. Bates came next in the list of speakers. He spoke on "Facing the Issue," and said in part: "The issue is simply this. "Are we to be ruled by five or six men who own the brewery and provide the funds for fighting the cases for bootleggers? Shall it be those people, or shall it be you people who pay the taxes and who voted the county dry? The prosecutor, common pleas judge, mayor, prosecutor and police are paid by you to do their duty. Do they do it? The mayor until last Thursday or Friday gave reasonably good service. But he quit, the common pleas judge adjourned his court so far as the liquor business was concerned, last week, but there is plenty of evidence that he has heard and is hearing other matters. The prosecutor refuses to proceed in prosecuting the bootleggers when requested to do so. The officials mentioned have said, just as plainly as they could say it by their actions, that they will not prosecute and convict any liquor seller. The only thing left to do is to find some court in the county who will hear a case on its merits."

Rev. Mr. Bates said that one of the local saloon men is credited with the statement that he paid the mayor fifteen dollars a week for protection and had told the mayor that he dare not prosecute him. He said, one of the attorneys told the mayor in court that he dare not call him down for some of his statements. "And it looks like there might be something in the story," concluded the speaker.

Rev. Clarence E. Miller, of the Central Christian church, spoke but a couple of minutes on the general conditions.

Rev. D. H. Bailey then spoke for some time on the actions of the local officials, and, as he said for the benefit and enlightenment of a certain local attorney, he read an article from a recent issue of a paper describing the conviction of a lawyer charged with impeding and obstructing justice in the courts.

Continuing the speaker said: "The local jury commission is made up in such a way that little or nothing can be expected from it in the selection of juries to try bootleggers. One of the members is an ex-saloonkeeper. It is fully assured that there can be no convictions in the common pleas court with the present commission. Judge B. G. Young, Prosecutor Justice, Probate Judge Spencer are down and out so far as we are concerned. Spencer is incensed like the other judges and a number. As the girl arrested may be had a right to hear the case taken before him. All the bootlegging lawyers say he had no [illegible] It was a new question. There was no known precedent to go by. SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS. JOHN CRAMER

Condition Not Though Alarming Until Monday Morning.

INDICATIONS POINT TO NARCOTIC POISONING

Says One of Attending Physicians, Deceased Was Suffering from Nervous Depression Caused by Death of Relative—Only Post-Mortem Can Determine Cause of Death.

When the doctor arrived he found the woman dying and immediately called Dr. A. Rhu. Drs. A. M. Crane and F. L. Hedges also arrived in a few minutes, but the physicians found it impossible to save the unfortunate woman.

One of the attending physicians states that narcotic poisoning was indicated in his diagnosis, while the others refused to make a statement for publication.

Mrs Cramer moved to this city from Morral recently. She had been married but two years and according to statements of her relatives had been of exceptionally rugged constitution all her life. Her nervous trouble was due in large measure, their state, to the recent death of a relative.

ACCIDENT AT AGOSTA; MAN HURT IN HAYFIELD

His Horses Run Away, Dragging the Reaper Over Him.

Monday morning about 11 o'clock LeRoy Allen, a farm hand employed by Hiram Sylvester, two miles south of Agosta, met with a painful accident. The young man was cutting hay when the neck yoke became disarranged and he stopped the horses to fix it. While in front of the animals one of them reared, striking him in the face and throwing him beneath the mowing machine. The horses became frightened and started to run, the machine passing over Allen's body. For a few moments he lay in a stunned condition and then arose and stopped the horses which were running about in a circle in the field. Allen was badly bruised about the face, right arm and back and received a gash in the corner of the right eye, where the horse struck him. The machine was damaged to some extent. Dr. E. Culbertson, of Agosta, attended the injured man.
